POST MISSION STATEMENT

The mission of the California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) is to continually enhance the professionalism of California law enforcement in serving its communities.

PREFACE

Government Code §1031 requires a pre-employment background investigation for peace officers; this requirement is further defined in Commission Regulation 1953. Similarly, Penal Code § 13510 authorizes POST to establish minimum standards for public safety dispatchers; those standards, including a background investigation, are defined in Commission Regulations 1956-1960.

The POST Background Investigation Manual: Guidelines for the Investigator is intended to provide guidance to assist in satisfying these requirements and in otherwise ensuring that the background investigations of California peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates are consistent, thorough, lawful, and effective. The manual was developed in conjunction with and in support of Commission regulations, relevant state and federal laws, personal history statements, and evaluation criteria, all of which are described herein.

Although these guidelines are detailed and comprehensive, this manual is intended as a resource rather than a replacement for adequate training and other needed forms of agency support for background investigators. Comments and suggestions concerning these guidelines should be directed to your Regional Consultant.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The Background Investigation Manual: Guidelines for the Investigator provides a comprehensive guide for conducting background investigations of peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates. The strong foundation set forth by the original authors, Shelley Spilberg, Ph.D., Sid Smith, and Greg Murphy, has become a model for conducting background investigations in California and nationwide.

Continuing this legacy, this edition provides current, relevant, and comprehensive guidance to ensure that background investigators have the tools necessary to facilitate investigations that are complete, thorough, and fair as provided for in POST regulations, and state and federal laws.

Revisions to the manual have been guided by the input of Gary Barner, Amy Compani, Leslie Lazzarini, Sid Smith, Maureen Swanson, and Mario Yagoda whose practical knowledge and expertise in conducting background investigations have proven invaluable.

POST Regional Consultants continue to offer their guidance and provide a constant resource of feedback from the field, which helps to shape the guidance in this manual, and POST's legal staff continues to be instrumental in providing advice and legal counsel with respect to relevant statutes and case law.

Finally, the revisions to and the existence of this manual would not be possible without the continued support of POST Management and Executive Teams.

INTRODUCTION

The pre-employment background investigation satisfies two goals: 1) assuring compliance with all applicable minimum standards for appointment and 2) screening out candidates who, based on their past history or other relevant information, are found unsuitable for the positions in question. The express purpose of this manual is to assist background investigators — especially but not exclusively new investigators — in conducting investigations that satisfy both of these goals.

Backgrounds are among the most important investigations that a law enforcement agency will ever conduct. The manner in which a background investigation is conducted can make the difference between hiring an individual who will truly protect and serve, versus someone who may cause harm to oneself, the agency, and society.

Background investigations are also among the most challenging investigations to conduct. They must be comprehensive if they are to lead to informed hiring decisions. Past misconduct and other signs of unsuitability must be uncovered so that dangerous or otherwise unfit candidates are screened out. At the same time, inquiries into past performance must stay within the tight parameters of fair employment practices. Furthermore, the areas investigated — and the evaluation of the resulting information — must be treated consistently across all candidates.

Background investigators must therefore be knowledgeable about all applicable local, state, and federal fair employment laws. They must be conversant in the legal requirements for appointment to the positions in question. They must heed all agency policies, practices, and operational limitations. They must base their inquiries and evaluations on candidate behaviors that have a direct relationship to the requirements and demands of the position, and they must do so with consistency and without bias. They must be able to articulate the information gathered from a wide variety of sources and how it is used in determining candidate suitability.

This manual is intended to assist background investigators in accomplishing this challenging task. The procedures and guidance presented here explain what information to gather, and how that information should be considered in determining candidate suitability.

FOCUS OF THE MANUAL

1. “Screen-out” vs. “Select-in” Orientation

POST has the responsibility for developing standards and ensuring compliance with those standards for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. POST regulations mandate what must be done in order to satisfy the minimum standards for appointment. Therefore, these guidelines are written from a “screen-out” rather than a “select-in” perspective; that is, they are designed to assist in identifying and weeding out the unfit, rather than distinguishing excellent candidates from those who just meet minimum qualifications. Agencies have the right to increase these standards as well as require additional standards.

2. Target Readership: Background Investigators

This manual was written expressly for background investigators. Although it may prove useful to others besides investigators, it is not intended as a comprehensive resource document for administrators, legal counsel, or others who are not directly involved in conducting background investigations.

Note: In California, third party background investigators (i.e., private contractors) must be Licensed Private Investigators¹ or attorneys. The actions of contract investigators are highly regulated by the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act (ICRAA), Civil Code § 1786 et seq. Because of the complexity of this area of law, the special procedures and requirements for non-agency investigators are not the focus of this manual. Contract investigators are strongly advised to seek out competent and professional training on ICRAA.*

3. Target Jobs: Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher

California law requires the completion of pre-employment background investigations for peace officers² and public safety dispatchers where the employing agency participates in the POST Public Safety Dispatcher Program.³ As POST has been charged with the responsibility for developing selection standards for peace officers and public safety dispatchers, the focus of this manual is therefore limited to conducting background investigations on these two classifications. Local agency policy or regulation may require the completion of a pre-employment background on a host of other classifications of employment (e.g., secretarial support staff, records personnel, community service officers). Although some principles discussed here may be relevant regardless of classification, caution must be exercised when applying this guidance to classes of employment outside the mandate given POST. Agencies are urged to work in close consultation with their legal counsel.

4. Supplement to Formal Training

This manual is not intended to serve as a substitute for competent, professional training, rather it provides guidance to supplement formal training. Effective July 1, 2023, investigators are required to complete POST-Certified background investigation training prior to conducting investigations [Commission Regulations 1953(a)(1) and 1959(a)(1).] Effective training of background investigators greatly improves the quality of backgrounds and candidate selection. In addition to the POST-certified background investigation training, background investigator professional associations — such as the California Background Investigators Association (CBIA) and the California Association of Law Enforcement Background Investigators (CALEBI) — offer relevant training as well as networking and related benefits.

1 Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7512 et seq.; see also Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7520 [necessity of license].

2 Cal. Gov. Code § 1031(d).

3 Commission Regulation 1959

5. Not Legal Advice

Although the manual contains discussions of the many pertinent employment laws and their impact on background investigations, the information presented here should not be treated as legal research, legal opinion, or legal advice. Background investigators are strongly encouraged to consult, work closely with, and abide by the advice of their agency's legal counsel.

THE ROLE OF POST

POST serves a variety of functions with respect to the background investigation process. These functions include establishing selection standards, certifying training, providing technical assistance, and conducting compliance inspections.

1. Selection Standards

In response to specific mandates from the state legislature, POST has been charged with the responsibility of developing selection standards for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. California regulatory agencies, such as POST, establish regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act. Once properly adopted, these regulations appear in the California Code of Regulations (Title 11, Division 2, Article 5). As authorized by the state legislature, these regulations carry the force of law and often seek to clarify or expand upon specific legislative enactments (statutes), for example in the Penal or Government Codes.

Commission Regulations 1950-1955 contain the selection standards for peace officers. Commission Regulation 1953 includes the requirements for conducting peace officer background investigations. The peace officer medical and psychological evaluation requirements are outlined in Regulations 1954 and 1955.

Commission Regulations 1956-1960 contain the selection standards for public safety dispatchers. Commission Regulations 1959 and 1960 include the requirements for conducting the public safety dispatcher background investigation and the medical evaluation, respectively.

These standards are discussed in detail in Chapter 3, "Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework." They are also located in the California Code of Regulations (Title 11, Division 2, Article 5).

2. Training Course Certification

POST certifies courses specific to background investigations, including:

- 1) Background Investigation – A basic level of instruction designed for individuals who are new to conducting background investigations. The training offers core level instruction providing foundational knowledge of POST regulations, state, and federal laws, as well as general processes and procedures for conducting equitable, effective, and efficient investigations.
- 2) Background Investigation Update – A more advanced level of instruction designed for experienced investigators who have already undergone core training. The training generally provides updates to POST regulations, relevant state and federal laws, and additional guidance to assist with maintaining compliance with POST requirements.
- 3) Training Seminars/Conferences – Courses that are periodically certified or presented by POST to deal with unique circumstances or groups. These training sessions provide instruction on various background investigation-related topics and other relevant areas of interest.

Other POST-Certified courses, such as “Interview and Interrogation” may also prove helpful to background investigators.

3. Technical Assistance

POST professional support to the background investigation process includes:

- Publications – In addition to this manual, POST produces manuals on interviewing peace officer candidates, medical screening, and psychological screening. Although these manuals are not specifically written for the background investigator and their primary purpose is to provide technical guidance to others involved in the hiring process, they may include information relevant to the background investigation.
- Forms and Other Screening Documents – Such as the Personal History Statements (POST 2-251–Personal History Statement-Peace Officer and 2-255–Personal History Statement-Public Safety Dispatcher⁴), Medical History Statements (POST 2-252–Medical History Statement-Peace Officer and 2-264–Medical History Statement-Public Safety Dispatcher), Medical Examination Reports (POST 2-253–Medical Examination Report-Peace Officer and 2-265–Medical Examination Report-Public Safety Dispatcher), and Suitability Declarations (POST 2-363–Medical Suitability Declaration and 2-364–Psychological Suitability Declaration).
- Consultative Services (through its own professional staff) – Investigators should feel free to contact their POST Regional Consultants.

4. Compliance Inspections

The Legislature has charged POST with the responsibility to conduct compliance inspections to verify that persons appointed as peace officers and public safety dispatchers are selected in accordance with the selection standards. POST Regional Consultants make regular visits to the agencies in their jurisdictions to inspect the background investigations completed on those who have been hired since the last site visit. If deficiencies are detected, they work with the agency by suggesting methods for correction and establishing a timetable for correction. A follow-up visit may be scheduled to ensure that the deficiencies are corrected. Consequences may be invoked if agencies resist or fail to correct problems within a reasonable period of time. Chapter 6, “POST Compliance Inspections,” discusses the compliance inspection process.

POST VS. AGENCY CANDIDATE SCREENING CRITERIA

The selection standards imposed by state statutes and POST regulations are minimum standards. Agencies are free to establish more rigorous selection criteria, as long as they are job-related and legally defensible. For example, agencies may choose to require peace officers to have completed a specified number of college credits, although state law only requires high school graduation or the equivalent.⁵

Verifying most of the statutory and regulatory minimum qualification standards, such as age, employment eligibility, and absence of a felony or other disqualifying criminal conviction, is relatively clear-cut. However, California Government Code § 1031\(d\) also requires all peace officer candidates to be screened for “good moral character.” What prior conduct constitutes good moral character (or, more importantly, the absence thereof)?

The POST background dimensions, presented in the next chapter, are intended to assist agencies and investigators in answering this question by identifying and detailing the attributes underlying moral character and other qualities essential to the jobs of peace officer and public safety dispatcher. Nevertheless, it is ultimately up to each agency to establish its own clearly articulated legally defensible standards of conduct.

⁴ Also refer to Appendix E.

⁵ In the case of public safety dispatchers, there is no educational minimum specified in state law for employment.

ORGANIZATION OF THE MANUAL

The remainder of this manual is divided into five sections. Chapter 2, “Background Investigation Dimensions and Bias Assessment Framework,” provides a common set of peace officer and dispatcher attributes that must be considered during the background investigation and the Bias Assessment Framework for use in peace officer background investigations. Chapter 3, “Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework,” details the statutory and regulatory requirements surrounding background investigations. The next two chapters approach the background investigation from different perspectives: Chapter 4, “The Background Investigation Process,” describes the chronology of the investigation; while Chapter 5, “Areas of Investigation and POST Personal History Statements,” presents a topic-by-topic explanation of the process, using the Personal History Statement as its framework. Lastly, Chapter 6, “POST Compliance Inspections,” is intended to clarify (as well as demystify) the procedure, expectations, and common problems detected during the annual POST site visit.

BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION DIMENSIONS AND BIAS ASSESSMENT FRAMEWORK

PEACE OFFICER AND PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHER BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION DIMENSIONS

Job-relatedness is the cornerstone of every lawful, effective candidate screening procedure. The demonstrated necessity of every pre-employment inquiry for evaluating the skills, abilities, and attributes required for effective job performance is critical to ensuring that those selected are qualified, and serves as a strong defense against allegations of unfairness or discrimination.

Job-relatedness, or “validity,” is characteristic of selection procedures that are derived from an analysis of the job and its requirements and demands. POST has conducted repeated statewide job analyses on both peace officers and public safety dispatchers. In conjunction with the creation of this manual, job analytic data on these two positions were reanalyzed in order to derive a new set of essential attributes of peace officers and public safety dispatchers. Many sources of information were reviewed and reanalyzed, as described in Appendix A, “Development of POST Background Investigation Dimensions.”

Based on these analyses, one common set of background dimensions was created for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. These ten dimensions are listed in Table 2.1. Commission Regulations 1953\(b\) and 1959\(b\) stipulate that the ten background dimensions shall be considered in the conduct of every peace officer/public safety dispatcher investigation. The dimensions are organized into five major categories (Moral Character, Handling Stress and Adversity, Work Habits, Interactions with Others, and Intellectually-Based Abilities).

Although these background investigation dimensions were selected based on their specific amenability to assessment during the background investigation, a number of them are also evaluated elsewhere in the selection process. For example, “Integrity” is assessed at several other pre-employment stages, such as during the hiring interview and psychological screening. Figure 2.1 identifies the similarities of the background investigation and psychological screening dimensions for peace officer candidates. The overlap shows the importance of the background investigation to the psychological evaluation. Six of these—Integrity, Impulse Control/Attention to Safety, Substance Abuse and Other Risk-Taking Behavior, Stress Tolerance, Conscientiousness, and Decision-Making/Judgment—are identical. This overlap is also apparent when comparing behavioral indicators included in the background dimensions and the specific counterproductive behaviors contained within the parallel psychological screening dimensions.

Comparison of Background Investigation and Psychological Screening Dimensions

Background Investigation Dimensions	Psychological Screening Dimensions
Integrity	Integrity
Impulse control/attention to safety	Impulse control/attention to safety
Substance abuse and other risk-taking behavior	Substance abuse and other risk-taking behavior
Stress tolerance Confronting and overcoming problems, obstacles, and adversity	Emotional regulation/stress tolerance
Conscientiousness	Conscientiousness
Decision-making and judgment	Decision-making and judgment

	Adaptability/flexibility
Communication skills Learning ability

Despite similarities between the background investigation and psychological screening dimensions, there are major differences. The background investigation behavioral indicators consist of past behaviors; as such, they are intended to provide the background investigator with a set of markers to look for in the candidate's personal history. In contrast, the positive and counterproductive behaviors underlying the psychological screening dimensions are manifested by peace officers, thereby requiring inferential expertise on the part of the psychologist to make predictions about the likelihood that the candidate will manifest these behaviors if hired. Therefore, while both the background investigator and the psychologist collect and evaluate similar personal history information, they do so from two different professional perspectives and competencies.⁶

The redundancy of these dimensions is intentional, as it serves to highlight the interdependence of these selection criteria as well as enhance the measurement accuracy of important peace officer and public safety dispatcher character attributes.

Each background investigation dimension includes a behaviorally based definition and description, along with a set of indicators for use by background investigators in evaluating candidates against these attributes. Note, however, that specific thresholds of acceptability (e.g., number of allowable moving violations) are not included. The establishment of tolerance levels is an agency's prerogative and may well vary between peace officers and public safety dispatchers.

Agencies are strongly encouraged to establish standards associated with such issues as criminal convictions, thefts, illegal drug use and other criminal conduct, and driving history. If these issues have not been addressed, background investigators are faced with the need to continuously consult the chain of command every time they encounter negative information. This slows the process and may expose the department to liability in the event that inconsistent and/or inappropriate standards are applied.

Investigators must also exercise caution not to impose their own personal beliefs and/or prejudices as the benchmark against which to measure character, especially if the agency has not defined its standards. To be defensible, agency standards must be job-related and consistent with business necessity; moreover, overly demanding selection requirements further reduce an already-shrinking applicant pool.

The use of these dimensions in organizing and supporting the investigators' observations and findings is discussed in Step 9, Report and Background Packet Preparation in Chapter 4, "The Background Investigation Process."

BIAS ASSESSMENT FRAMEWORK (Peace Officers)

Commission Regulation 1955 requires that an evaluation of a peace officer's emotional and mental condition include "bias against race or ethnicity, gender, nationality, religion, disability, or sexual orientation, that might adversely affect the exercise of the powers of a peace officer." Government Code § 1031.3 required POST to study, review, and update regulations and screening materials to identify implicit and explicit bias in peace officer candidates. In 2021, POST commenced a subject matter expert panel to conduct research and develop regulations and guidance to meet this requirement,⁷ resulting in a comprehensive literature review⁸ and the development of the Bias Assessment Framework (framework).⁹ Regulations requiring use of the framework and reporting of bias relevant findings to the hiring department were implemented August 1, 2022.¹⁰

The framework (Table 2.2) illustrates the important role that background investigation findings play in psychological evaluation. It requires that "the psychologist's assessment of a peace officer candidate's explicit and implicit bias be informed, in part, by the candidate's background and personal history information, including (1) history of biased behaviors, (2) evidence of mitigating or protective factors subsequent to biased behaviors, and (3) indicators of traits or attributes that may aggravate/facilitate or mitigate/protect against discriminatory behavior."¹¹ As identified in Table 2.2, the psychological evaluator relies on background information to assess the candidate and determine their overall suitability for peace officer employment.

Table 2.2 depicts the areas relevant to the background investigation, specifically biased behaviors and bias-relevant traits and attributes. Tables 2.3a and 2.3b provide examples and serve as guidance in determining investigative areas to assist with identifying behaviors, traits, and attributes that can be either aggravating/facilitative or mitigating/protective. Aggravating or facilitative factors (e.g., negative behaviors) are those which have been shown to increase the potential for biases being expressed in behaviorally discriminatory ways. Mitigating or protective factors (e.g., positive behaviors) are those shown to decrease the behavioral expression of bias in some contexts. During the background investigation it is important to consider both of these factors, especially when conducting interviews and gathering personal history information. For example, if there is a history of biased behavior (e.g., use of a racial epithet), it is important to provide evidence, if relevant and available, of mitigating factors subsequent to the biased behavior (e.g., evidence that the offense is so minor, or so much time has passed, or it happened under such unique conditions that it is unlikely to reflect a stable bias). Effective January 1, 2023, hiring agencies "shall deny employment to a candidate for a peace officer position if, during a preemployment background it is determined that in the past 7 years and since 18 years of age, the candidate has engaged in membership in a hate group, participation in any hate group activity, or advocacy of public expressions of hate." [Penal Code § 13681\(b\)]. Evidence of these behaviors would be gathered as part of the background investigation and incorporated into the background narrative report, along with other relevant bias behaviors. Footnote 1 in Table 2.3a provides additional information on this specific law.

- 1 Background investigations should include a broad range of diverse references and developed references including workplace (e.g., supervisors, co-workers), family members, neighbors, close personal relationships, social and family friends, teachers, military colleagues, and other contacts.
- 2 Psychological evaluators are required to assess each of the targeted constructs, but the data sources used for the assessments are at the discretion of each evaluator. For example, when the background investigation and psychological interview adequately assess biased behaviors and biased attitudes, respectively, written assessments of those constructs may not contribute incrementally to the assessment.
- 3 When there is clear and direct evidence of unmitigated biased behaviors or attitudes, other factors are not relevant for assessing the bias of a peace officer candidate. However, when direct evidence of explicit or implicit bias is unavailable, ambiguous, or relatively weak, it may be useful to consider related factors such as neutral or favorable intergroup contact, motivations to respond without prejudice, perceptions of social norms about prejudice, and executive function. These factors also generally contribute to more equitable behavior and fair treatment of others, and thus can mitigate tendencies to act in discriminatory ways even when some evidence of bias is detected.

Non-exhaustive List of Biased Behaviors

This table provides a non-exhaustive list of examples of aggravating/facilitating (negative) factors and mitigating/protective (positive) factors to guide background investigators in the areas that should be investigated and reported upon in support of the Bias Assessment Framework and the psychological evaluation.

Examples of Aggravating or Facilitative Factors	Examples of Mitigating or Protective Factors
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Use of slurs or epithets targeting a person or group because of one or more actual or perceived characteristics involving disability, gender, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, or because of association with a person with one or more of these actual or perceived characteristics 2. Acts of violence, harassment or discrimination targeting a person or group because of one or more actual or perceived characteristics involving disability, gender, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, or because of association with a person with one or more of these actual or perceived characteristics 3. History of disciplinary actions, reprimands, or other formal consequences (e.g., at school, work, military) for biased behavior against a person or group because of one or more actual or perceived characteristics involving disability, gender, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, or sexual orientation, or because of association with a person with one or more of these actual or perceived characteristics 4. Statements, postings on social media sites or in forums, and other behaviors indicating bias, social group dominance/supremacy, or espousing intolerance of or hostile action against a person or group because of one or more actual or perceived characteristics involving disability, gender, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, or because of association with a person with one or more of these actual or perceived characteristics 5. Affiliation and engagement with a hate group, participation in any hate group activity, or public expressions of hate 6. Voluntary and ongoing association with persons who hold membership in a hate group, participate in hate group activities, or engage in public expressions of hate.¹ 	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Evidence that the candidate made a prompt, good-faith effort to make restitution² 2. Evidence that the offense is so minor, or so much time has passed, or it happened under such unique conditions that it is unlikely to reflect a stable bias 3. Evidence that the candidate has matured or rehabilitated 4. The information, evidence or report was from a questionably reliable source 5. In the case of voluntary and ongoing association with persons who openly espouse bias, mitigating evidence may be that the association is warranted by one or more important social, familial or occupational ties and the candidate does not share the bias.

1 "Hate group" means an organization that supports, advocates for, threatens, or practices genocide or the commission of hate crimes as defined in § 422.55 of the Penal Code. "Participation in any hate group activity" means active and direct involvement in, or coordination or facilitation of, any hate crime by hate group members. "Public expression of hate" means any statement or expression to another person, including any statement or expression made in an online forum that is accessible to another person, that explicitly advocates for, explicitly supports, or explicitly threatens to commit genocide or any hate crime or that explicitly advocates for or explicitly supports any hate group. Further definitions regarding hate group affiliation, activity, or advocacy of public expressions of hate are defined in the California Law Enforcement Accountability Reform (CLEAR) Act. (Penal Code § 13680 et seq.) Affiliation with a hate group or hate group member may also include the public display of any tattoo, uniform, insignia, flag, or logo that indicates support for the genocide of, or violence toward, any group of persons based upon race, ethnicity, nationality, religion, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, or disability.

Non-exhaustive List of Bias-Relevant Traits and Attributes

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Trait cynicism (opinions conveying a highly negative view of human nature) • Misanthropy (perceptions of others as hostile and threatening, general suspiciousness, and cynicism regarding the motives of others) • Disinhibited or antagonizing externalizing tendencies (examples: impulsivity, disconstraint, antisocial behavior.) • Interpersonal intolerance (examples: rigidity, closed-mindedness, antipathy, or unreflective responding toward a group or its members.) • Low empathy (particularly vis-à-vis persons outside one’s own identity group) and other personality traits and symptoms shown in the police literature to be associated with post-hire counterproductive behavior involving mistreatment of others 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • High theory of mind (the ability to recognize and anticipate others’ intentions, beliefs and desires) • High cognitive or executive control (the capacity to constrain thought processes and behavior to reach goal-relevant ends, resulting from processes including planning and monitoring behavior; coordinating behavior in complex, novel, or ambiguous situations; selectively activating information that facilitates one’s goals while actively inhibiting information that interferes; and overriding impulsive or automatic responses when they clash with goals) • Favorable or neutral experience(s) with members of other groups (intergroup contact) • Motivations to respond without prejudice • Perspective taking (actively contemplating others’ psychological experiences, particularly among persons outside one’s own identity group) • Accountability to social norms (the implicit or explicit expectation that one may be called on to justify one’s beliefs, feelings, and actions to others)

The role of the background investigator is not to conduct medical or psychological evaluations or assessments of the candidate, rather it is to gather facts, supported by evidence, to assist with verifying good moral character and the absence of past behavior indicative of unsuitability to perform the duties of a peace officer [Commission Regulation 1953(a)] or public safety dispatcher [Commission Regulation 1959(a)] and to provide relevant background and personal history information to the hiring authority. For peace officer candidates, the information must also be provided to the screening psychologist, including documentation of potential biases (Commission Regulation 1955). A vital source of information about a candidate can be gathered from third-party sources (e.g., personal references).

...The reliability of third-party sources (friends, family, work references, neighbors) is also subject to great variation as a function of differences in frequency and duration of exposure to the candidate, the context of that exposure, and motivation to aid or harm the candidate. When evaluating the reliability and quality of information provided by third parties, it is important to consider the impartiality of the source and their familiarity with the subject. This does not mean, however, that a collateral informant needs substantial or prolonged exposure to the individual before reporting credibly. Third-party sources with very limited familiarity with the candidate may have accurate and relevant information if their exposure was sufficient to provide a reliable and accurate account or impression. Particularly when investigating a history of biased behavior, it is important that background investigators query "a broad range of diverse references and developed references, including workplace (e.g., supervisors, co-workers), family members, neighbors, close personal relationships, social and family friends, teachers, military colleagues, and other contacts" (Bias Assessment Framework, footnote 1). It is especially important to include, whenever available, third-party sources who differ from the candidate in terms of the characteristics listed in GC § 1031(f) (i.e., race or ethnicity, gender, nationality, religion, disability, or sexual orientation). Interviewing collateral sources from within the candidate's same identity groups may yield little information about biased behaviors even when they exist. This also points to the importance of obtaining information from secondary references (i.e., references offered by a candidate's initial references). These developed references may yield more information about the candidate than the primary references initially provided by the candidate... (Source: Peace Officer Psychological Screening Manual, Chapter 9.)

The Background Investigation Dimensions also provide a resource for identifying behaviors directly relevant to the Bias Assessment Framework. For example, Interpersonal Skills (Dimension 7) identifies relevant mitigating or protective factors (i.e., positive behaviors) such as social concern, social sensitivity and tolerance, which include awareness of the impact of one's own words and behavior on others, the ability to interact with others in a tactful and respectful manner, and showing sensitivity, concern, tolerance, and interpersonal effectiveness in one's daily interactions. This dimension also identifies several factors that would indicate aggravating (i.e., negative) behaviors, including lack of tact and impartiality in treating all members of society; making hasty, biased judgments based on physical appearance, race, gender and other group member characteristics; uttering epithets derogatory of another person's race, religion, gender, national origin, or sexual orientation; and making inappropriate comments regarding personal characteristics about specific groups.

THE BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION REPORT

The Background Investigation Dimensions and the Bias Assessment Framework (for peace officer candidates) serve as points of focus for the background investigation itself, as well as issues to be considered when preparing the final report. The background investigation behavioral indicators consist of past behaviors; as such, they are intended to provide the background investigator with a set of markers to look for in the candidate's personal history. Although it is not necessary to include a separate evaluation of the candidate on each of the ten dimensions, the report must include those that are relevant based on the candidate's personal history. In the case of peace officer candidates, the report must also include any findings of biases, including hate group affiliation, activity, or public expressions of hate,¹² and evidence of positive behaviors, if relevant, that may mitigate potential biases.

¹² California Law Enforcement Accountability Reform (CLEAR) Act, Penal Code § 13680 et seq.

Not only is it required, but it is imperative that all relevant findings be included in the background investigation narrative report [Commission Regulation 1953(g)] and supporting documentation be included in the background file [subsection 1953(e)]. Without findings from a comprehensive background investigation, the hiring authority and those conducting peace officer screening evaluations would necessarily be forced to rely solely on the candidate's self-reported history, which the candidate may willfully conceal or naively deny.¹³

HIRING CONSIDERATIONS

No amount of standard-setting, however, will eliminate the need to make case-by-case judgments based on specific facts presented by each candidate's background. Rarely is one fact a sufficient basis for disqualifying an individual; rather, it is generally necessary to investigate the circumstances surrounding each fact in order to make an educated determination of the candidate's suitability, taking into consideration such factors as:

- The patterns of past behavior and specific combinations of fact and circumstances,
- The consequences of past undesirable behavior occurs again or becomes generally known,
- The likelihood of recurrence of the undesirable behavior,
- The relevance of the past behavior to the job demands and requirements,
- The length of time between a particular undesirable act and the application for employment, with consideration given to the intervening behavior of the candidate,
- Positive attributes and/or behaviors that may mitigate past behaviors, and
- The legal rights of the candidate.

For peace officers, screening psychologists take into consideration similar factors when reviewing candidate personal history, including:

1. The nature, extent, and seriousness of the conduct;
2. The circumstances surrounding the conduct;
3. The frequency and recency of the conduct;
4. The individual's age and maturity at the time of the conduct;
5. The extent to which participation was voluntary;
6. The presence or absence of permanent behavioral changes;
7. The motivation for the conduct;
8. The degree to which the behavior violates societal and cultural norms;
9. The likelihood of continuation or recurrence; and
10. The relevance of the behavior to one or more of the POST Psychological Screening Dimensions.

¹³ POST Peace Officer Psychological Screening Manual, Chapter 7, The Background Investigation and the Psychological Evaluation.

These factors are considered in evaluating the relevance of any given behavioral act or admission.¹⁴ Thus, it is important for investigators to be aware of these factors when conducting the background investigation to ensure that screening psychologists have appropriate personal history information. These factors and other information relevant to background investigations can be found in Chapter 7: Personal History Information of the Peace Officer Psychological Screening Manual. Background investigators and other pertinent department personnel are highly encouraged to review the information presented in the chapter.

LEGAL QUALIFICATIONS AND STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

The background investigation of peace officers and public safety dispatchers is one part of a larger pre-employment screening process dictated by California law and POST regulations. In addition to the background investigation, the process must include a written examination, hiring interview, medical evaluation, and (for peace officers) a psychological evaluation. The statutory and regulatory requirements — particularly those that have an impact on background investigations — for screening peace officers and public safety dispatchers are reviewed here.

OVERVIEW OF PRE-EMPLOYMENT SCREENING REQUIREMENTS

The selection standards for peace officers and public safety dispatchers are summarized below. The codes and regulations discussed here are included in Table 3.1 (located on page 3-19).

Peace Officers

STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS

Government Code § 1031 establishes minimum selection standards for peace officers. It includes minimum criteria on eligibility for employment, age (see additional age requirements in GC § 1031.4, below), and education. It requires that applicants be fingerprinted as part of the search of local, state, and national files to disclose any criminal record and be found to be of good moral character as determined by a thorough background investigation. It further requires that applicants undergo psychological screening, which includes determining if the candidate exhibits bias toward specific groups. Personal history information gleaned from the background investigation is vital and, in fact, required to psychologically evaluate peace officer candidates. These requirements, which form the basis for the background investigation, are discussed in detail in Chapter 5, “Areas of Investigation and Personal History Statements.”

Government Code § 1031.4, implemented in January 2022 by Assembly Bill (AB) 89, raised the minimum age criteria set forth in Government Code § 1031 to 21 years of age at the time of appointment for specified peace officers. This requirement applies to peace officers employed by a state agency and appointed pursuant to Penal Code (PC) sections 830.1, 830.2, 830.3, 830.32, or 830.33, as well as all peace officers employed by agencies participating in the POST program, regardless of the authority under which they are appointed. Exceptions include jail deputies appointed under Penal Code § 830.1(c) and members of the Office of Correctional Safety or Office of Internal Affairs of the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation appointed under Penal Code § 830.2(d), who must continue to meet the minimum age requirements of Government Code § 1031 (i.e., at least 18 years of age at time of appointment).

Government Code § 1031(f) also provides that peace officers must be found free of any physical, emotional, or mental condition, including bias against race or ethnicity, gender, nationality, religion, disability, or sexual orientation, that might adversely affect the exercise of the powers of a peace officer.

Government Code (GC) § 1029, provides that individuals who have been convicted of a felony, or other specified offenses, have been found incompetent to stand trial, found not guilty of a felony by reason of insanity, determined to be a mentally disordered sex offender, or been adjudged addicted to or in danger of being addicted to narcotics or committed to a state institution under Welfare and Institutions Code § 3051, are prohibited from becoming peace officers, except as provided in Government Code § 1029(b)-(e). Senate Bill \(SB\) 2 (2021)¹⁵ added and amended substantial provisions to Government Code § 1029, including disqualification from peace officer employment as a result of specified crimes against public justice, military offenses amounting to felony convictions, revocation of certification, inclusion in the National Decertification Index (NDI), and other provisions.

Juvenile convictions, where the candidate was adjudicated as a juvenile offender in juvenile court, are generally not disqualifying under Government Code § 1029 as juvenile orders are not convictions. [Welfare and Institutions Code (WIC) § 203.] However, it is recommended that the background investigator consult with legal counsel as a candidate's juvenile conviction may be disqualifying under Government Code § 1029 in certain circumstances if the charged offense was one listed under Welfare and Institutions Code § 707(b), if the candidate was tried as an adult, or if the candidate was committed to the California Department of Juvenile Justice (formerly known as the California Youth Authority). (See WIC § 1179.) If a candidate discloses a juvenile conviction, the background investigator will need to either have the candidate provide the juvenile court records or file a petition pursuant to Welfare and Institutions Code § 827 to obtain the records from the juvenile court as such records are confidential and will not be subject to release (even with a waiver) absent an order of the juvenile court.

In their fingerprint returns, the California Department of Justice (DOJ) and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) provide criminal record history information. Further, the firearms eligibility clearance by the DOJ should document eligibility to possess or purchase firearms (PC § 832.15) (DOJ submits a firearms clearance separately from the general fingerprint return)¹⁶. Government Code § 1029(f), implemented by SB 2, requires that the California DOJ also report any disqualifying information to POST to determine peace officer certification status.

Penal Code §§ 13680 through 13683 implements the California Law Enforcement Accountability Reform (CLEAR) Act which mandates that “any background investigation of a candidate for a peace officer position shall include an inquiry into whether the candidate has engaged or is engaging in membership in a hate group, participation in any hate group activity or advocacy of public expressions of hate.” Peace officer employment shall be denied if the candidate has engaged in membership or participation in hate group activities or public expressions of hate within the past seven years and since the age of 18.

Penal Code § 1170.18\(j\), § 29800, § 29805, and U.S. Code Title 18 § 922\(d\)\(9\) and \(g\) impose bans on possession of a firearm. For example, Penal Code § 1170.18(j) specifies that individuals who have had certain felony convictions resentenced and reduced to misdemeanors remain prohibited from possessing or owning firearms. Penal Code § 29800 and § 29805 specify that persons convicted of felonies and certain enumerated offenses, including misdemeanor offenses, may not own or possess a firearm either for life or for ten years following the date of conviction, depending on whether the individual was convicted of an offense enumerated under Penal Code § 29800 or § 29805. Finally, U.S. Code Title 18 § 922(d) and (g) collectively ban the possession, sale, transfer, or disposal of firearms or ammunition to certain enumerated individuals, including, but not limited to those who have been convicted in any court of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence.

15 Senate Bill (SB) 2 (2021): Peace Officer Certification added several sections to 1029 of the Government Code, required POST to establish a peace officer certification/decertification program, and implemented other provisions. SB 2 took effect on January 1, 2022. However, some of the reporting requirements did not become effective until January 1, 2023. Information about peace officer certification can be found here: <https://post.ca.gov/Certification>.

16 In the very rare instance that a DOJ firearms eligibility letter identifies that the agency needs to provide additional documentation for a candidate eligibility per 18 U.S.C. § 925(a)(1), POST has created a Firearms Eligibility Attestation (POST 2-367).

Government Code § 1031.1 establishes procedures that obligate employers to furnish specified information for the purposes of performing thorough background investigations for peace officers and other law enforcement agency applicants (e.g., public safety dispatchers). Government Code § 1031.1 is discussed in Chapter 5, “PHS Section 5: Experience and Employment.”

For candidates with prior peace officer experience, Penal Code § 832.12 imposes additional requirements that hiring departments review the officer’s general personnel file, or a separate file designated by the department or agency, for records of any investigations of misconduct involving the peace officer. Further, Penal Code § 13510.8 identifies criteria for ineligibility for certification and, if the candidate is POST-certified and previously employed, Penal Code § 13510.9\(d\)\(3\) requires that the agency conducting the background investigation contact POST to inquire into the reason the peace officer separated from their previous law enforcement employment.

Government Code § 1031.2 allows the post-offer collection of certain non-medical and non-psychological information during the peace officer background investigation if it was not reasonable to collect the information prior to the conditional offer of employment (COE). Title 2 of the California Code of Regulations (CCR) § 11071\(b\) further requires that a “bona fide” job offer be contingent upon these same requirements. The implications of this statute and regulation are discussed later in this chapter and in Chapter 4, “The Background Investigation Process.”

REGULATORY REQUIREMENTS

The POST peace officer selection requirements consist of:

- Regulation 1950: Peace Officer Selection Requirements
- Regulation 1951: Peace Officer Reading and Writing Ability Assessment
- Regulation 1952: Peace Officer Oral Interview
- Regulation 1953: Peace Officer Background Investigation
- Regulation 1954: Peace Officer Medical Evaluation
- Regulation 1955: Peace Officer Psychological Evaluation

Regulation 1950: Peace Officer Selection Requirements specifies who is covered by (and who is exempted from) Regulations 1951-1955. As indicated in 1950, all peace officer candidates are covered by these regulations, regardless of prior law enforcement experience either at the same department or at a different department within the same city, county, state, or district. However, the following candidates are exempt from these requirements:

1. Peace officers who change Penal Code classifications (e.g., from reserve to regular officer), assuming documentation exists showing that all current requirements were met, and the officer has worked continuously in the department since the time of initial appointment.
2. Peace officers whose department is merged with another department in the same city, county, state, or district, if documentation exists showing that all current requirements were met, and the officer has worked continuously in the department since the time of initial appointment.
3. Peace officers who are reappointed to the same department within 180 days of voluntary separation.¹⁷
4. Publicly elected peace officers.

For peace officers who are mandatorily reinstated (as a result of a personnel hearing, arbitration, court decision, etc.), POST requires that the department: (A) report the reinstatement to POST (B) resubmit fingerprints to DOJ and FBI (unless agency was never informed of the officer's separation from the department), (C) perform a new Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) record check, and (D) verify qualification for appointment.¹⁸

POST selection requirements must be satisfied prior to the date of appointment as a peace officer. Other specifics, including time limits, are discussed in each regulation.

Regulation 1951: Peace Officer Reading and Writing Ability Assessment specifies the options available for demonstrating that peace officer (including reserve officer) candidates possess adequate written communication skills.

Regulation 1952: Peace Officer Oral Interview specifies the requirements of the oral interview, including the six POST Interview Factors that must be addressed.

Regulation 1953: Peace Officer Background Investigation specifies the requirements for the background investigation, including mandatory background investigation training,¹⁹ evaluation criteria, required forms, areas of investigation, background investigation updates, and documentation and reporting. These regulations are detailed later in this chapter.

Regulation 1954: Peace Officer Medical Evaluation specifies medical evaluator qualifications, timing of the medical evaluation, medical screening procedures and evaluation criteria, required sources of information, and the second opinion rights of medically disqualified candidates.

Regulation 1954(e): Medical Evaluation Reporting Requirements mandates that the Medical Suitability Declaration (POST 2-363) is to be maintained in the candidate's background investigation file and that the candidate is determined to be medically suitable for peace officer employment prior to appointment. The declaration shall be available to POST during compliance inspections.

The information required in the medical suitability declaration is not medical; therefore, it is lawful to include it in the background file and make it available to POST during compliance inspections. However, any additional information provided by the physician that is medical, such as examination findings, requests for reasonable accommodations, etc., must be kept in a separate, confidential medical file. [See Civil Code (CC) § 56.20(a)] Information from the physician, medical or otherwise, may be communicated to the background investigator and others involved in the hiring process only if and to the extent the information is relevant to their respective determinations of candidate suitability.

Regulation 1955: Peace Officer Psychological Evaluation requirements mirror the requirements in Regulation 1954 (Medical Evaluation), including specifying psychological evaluator qualifications, timing of the evaluation, psychological screening procedures and evaluation criteria, required sources of information, and the second opinion rights of psychologically disqualified candidates.

The Psychological Evaluation Reporting Requirements [Regulation 1955(e)] mandates that the Psychological Suitability Declaration (POST 2-364) is to be maintained in the background investigation file and that the candidate is determined to be suitable for peace officer employment prior to appointment. The declaration shall be available to POST during compliance inspections.

The information in the suitability declaration form is not medical; therefore, it can be included in the background investigation file. However, additional information provided by the psychologist, such as evaluation findings, requests for reasonable accommodations, or other relevant information to suitability for appointment should be maintained in a separate, confidential medical file [CC § 56.20(a)]. Information from the psychologist, medical or otherwise, may be communicated to the background investigator and others involved in the hiring process only if and to the extent the information is relevant to their respective determinations of candidate suitability.

Public Safety Dispatchers

STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS

Penal Code § 13510\(c\) authorizes POST to establish minimum standards for recruiting and training public safety dispatchers working in agencies that participate in the POST program. In contrast to peace officer standards, there are no statutory minimum age or education requirements specific to public safety dispatchers, no statutory requirements related to felony or misdemeanor conviction, and no requirement for psychological screening.

REGULATORY REQUIREMENTS

The POST public safety dispatcher selection requirements consist of:

- Regulation 1956: Public Safety Dispatcher Selection Requirements
- Regulation 1957: Public Safety Dispatcher Verbal, Reasoning, Memory, and Perceptual Abilities Assessment
- Regulation 1958: Public Safety Dispatcher Oral Communication Assessment
- Regulation 1959: Public Safety Dispatcher Background Investigation
- Regulation 1960: Public Safety Dispatcher Medical Evaluation

Regulation 1956: Public Safety Dispatcher Selection Requirements specifies who is covered by (and who is exempted from) these standards. All public safety dispatcher “candidates” are subject to Regulations 1957-1960, regardless of prior public safety dispatcher experience either at the same department or at a different department within the same city, county, state, or district, or whether they are applying for a full-time or part-time position. However, the hiring department has the sole responsibility for determining what, if any, assessments are necessary for dispatchers who 1) are employed by a department that is merged with another department in the same city, county, state, or district, if documentation exists showing that the dispatcher was hired in accordance with POST requirements in effect at the time of hire; or 2) are reappointed to the same POST-participating department within 180 days of voluntary separation.

For public safety dispatchers who are mandatorily reinstated (as a result of a personnel hearing, arbitration, court decision, etc.), the department must report the reinstatement to POST through a correction to record, together with a copy of the official reinstatement documentation and resubmit fingerprints to DOJ and FBI, unless these agencies were never informed of the dispatcher’s separation from the department.

Peace officers who are assigned to dispatcher duties are not subject to POST Regulations 1957-1960.

POST selection requirements must be satisfied prior to the date of appointment as a public safety dispatcher. Other specifics, including time limits and transferability of results, are discussed in each regulation.

Regulation 1957: Public Safety Dispatcher Verbal, Reasoning, Memory, and Perceptual Abilities

Assessment specifies the options available for demonstrating that dispatcher candidates have adequate verbal, reasoning, memory, and perceptual abilities.

Regulation 1958: Public Safety Dispatcher Oral Communication Assessment provides that the oral communication abilities of public safety dispatcher candidates must be assessed prior to a COE.

Regulation 1959: Public Safety Dispatcher Background Investigation specifies the requirements for the background investigation, including mandatory background investigation training,²⁰ evaluation criteria, required forms, areas of investigation, background investigation updates, and documentation and reporting. These regulations are detailed later in this chapter.

Regulation 1960: Public Safety Dispatcher Medical Evaluation specifies medical evaluator qualifications, timing of the medical evaluation, medical screening procedures and evaluation criteria, required sources of information, and the second opinion rights of medically disqualified candidates.

Regulation 1960(e): Medical Evaluation Reporting Requirements provides that a medical suitability declaration is to be maintained in the candidate's background investigation file and must include: (A) the physician's contact information and medical license number; (B) the candidate's name; (C) the date the evaluation was completed; and (D) a signed statement affirming that the evaluation was conducted in accordance with POST regulations and that the candidate was determined to be medically suitable. The declaration shall be available to POST during compliance inspections.

The information required in the medical suitability declaration is not medical; therefore, it is lawful to include it in the background file. However, any additional information provided by the physician that is medical, including any request(s) for reasonable accommodation(s), must be kept in a separate, confidential medical file. See [CC § 56.20\(a\).] Information from the physician, medical and otherwise, may be communicated to the background investigator and others involved in the hiring process only if and to the extent that the information is relevant to their respective determinations of candidate suitability.

Although POST does not require a psychological evaluation for public safety dispatcher candidates, many departments include the evaluation as an additional selection standard.²¹

POST BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION REGULATIONS: PEACE OFFICERS (1953) AND PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHERS (1959)

Peace officer background investigation requirements are contained in Commission Regulation 1953; public safety dispatcher requirements are included in Commission Regulation 1959. Generally, there is close alignment between the requirements for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. Differences in the background investigation requirements are the result of statutory differences between the two classifications (for example, GC § 1029 prohibits convicted felons and those convicted of certain other enumerated offenses from becoming peace officers, but there is no equivalent statutory prohibition for dispatchers).

The background investigation regulations are summarized below. The descriptions note the similarities or differences between peace officers and public safety dispatcher regulations and the location of where the regulation is discussed in more detail elsewhere in the manual.

²¹ Cal. Pen Code § 13510\(d\); Commission Regulation 1956\(d\)

Background Investigation Evaluation Criteria

Commission Regulations 1953(b) and 1959(b)

The POST Background Investigation Dimensions described and discussed in Chapter 2: “Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher Background Investigation Dimensions” must be considered during every peace officer and public safety dispatcher background investigation. For peace officer backgrounds, biased behaviors, bias-relevant traits, and attributes, including hate group affiliation, activities and/or hate speech, must also be investigated. All relevant findings must be reported to the hiring department and screening psychologist.

Personal History Statements

Commission Regulations 1953(c) and 1959(c)

Applicants must complete a Personal History Statement (PHS) - POST 2-251 for Peace Officers; POST 2-255 for Public Safety Dispatchers, or an alternative questionnaire covering the same areas of investigation. See Chapter 5: “Areas of Investigation and the POST Personal History Statement.” Effective July 1, 2024, all peace officer candidates must complete the POST-developed 2-251 Personal History Statement – Peace Officer, or an online version of the PHS that contains an exact replication of questions on the POST 2-251 form.

Collection of Background Information – Pre- and Post-Conditional Offer of Employment

Commission Regulations 1953(d) and 1959(d)

In accordance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), no medical or other disability-related inquiries may be made during a background investigation that is conducted prior to a COE (pre-offer).

Background investigators may, under certain circumstances, make non-medical and non-psychological inquiries after a COE has been extended. Guidance on sequencing the background investigation in compliance with the ADA and FEHA is provided later in this chapter and in Chapter 4, “The Background Investigation Process.”

At the post-offer stage, background investigators must interact with screening psychologists, physicians, and others, as necessary, to ensure that everyone involved in the hiring process has the information necessary to conduct their respective assessments of the candidate.

Areas of Investigation

Commission Regulations 1953(e) and 1959(e)

The required areas of investigation for peace officer candidates and public safety dispatchers are quite similar. In addition, the regulations provide detailed specifics on the documentation necessary for each area of investigation for both types of candidates.

The required areas of investigation are summarized below. More detailed information is provided in Chapter 5: “Areas of Investigation and the POST Personal History Statement.”

- Employment Eligibility (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Government Code § 1031(a) requires that peace officers be eligible for employment by federal law. There are no specific citizenship requirements for public safety dispatchers. Proof of eligibility to work in the United States (U.S.) (e.g., USCIS Form I-9 – Employment Eligibility Verification) is required for both classifications.²²

- Age (Peace Officers) – Peace officers employed by state agencies or POST-participating agencies must be 21 years of age or older at the time of appointment. Exceptions are those appointed under Penal Code § 830.1(c) (i.e., jail deputies) or Penal Code § 830.2(d) (Office of Correctional Safety or Office of Internal Affairs of the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation) who must be at least 18 years of age at the time of appointment. (There are no similar age requirements in state law or POST regulation for public safety dispatchers.)
- Criminal Record and Other Qualification Checks – Local, State, and National (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Criminal and other records searches at the local, state, and national levels are required. Fingerprint clearances are required from the DOJ and FBI. Firearms clearances are required for peace officer candidates. A peace officer candidate's qualification for appointment must also be verified (GC § 1029).
- Driving Record Check (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – DMV reports or other official driving records are required for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers.
- Education Verification (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Minimum peace officer educational requirements are detailed in Government Code § 1031\(e\). Although there are no minimum educational requirements for public safety dispatchers, verification of educational history must be collected as a measure of conscientiousness, learning ability, and related attributes. Official transcripts are acceptable proof; diplomas are not.
- Employment History Checks (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Employment checks are required for a period of at least ten years for peace officers; employment checks of employers within the last ten years are required for public safety dispatchers. For peace officer candidates with prior experience, hiring departments are required to check their personnel, or other separate file(s) designated by the employing department, for records of investigations of misconduct (PC § 832.12) and check both their law enforcement separation and peace officer eligibility status with POST.
- Relatives/Personal References Checks (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Contacts and interviews with relatives, including former spouses/registered domestic partners, and personal references listed on the candidate's PHS are required for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers. Secondary references must also be contacted.
- Dissolution of Marriage Check (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Proof of marriage dissolution/separation is explicitly stipulated in the requirements for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers.
- Neighborhood Checks (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Contacts and interviews with neighbors are required for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers, regardless of length of time at residence.
- Military History Check (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Proof of Selective Service registration (where applicable) and military service records are required for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers.
- Credit Records Check (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Credit records checks are required for peace officers and public safety dispatchers.

²² The USCIS provides an employer resource to assist with identifying proper documentation for employment eligibility. See Handbook for Employers - <https://www.uscis.gov/i-9-central/form-i-9-resources/handbook-for-employers-m-274>.

- Social Media Check (Peace Officers) – Social media checks are required to ensure that peace officer candidates are suitable for employment.

Background Investigation Updates

Commission Regulations 1953(f) and 1959(f)

Background investigation updates are explicitly sanctioned for peace officers and public safety dispatchers who are either reappointed to the same department, or who transfer (with no break in service) to a different department within the same city, county, state, or district that maintains a centralized personnel and background investigation support division. Under certain circumstances, updated background investigations may also be conducted for interim chiefs of police.

For reappointments²³, the background investigation update must address any new information reported on the PHS covering the time period from when the last PHS was completed (e.g., their initial background investigation). All update investigations, at a minimum, must include a new local criminal record check, state and national criminal record checks (unless the individual was not removed from the department's DOJ or FBI files), DMV check, credit check, and verification of qualification for appointment per Government Code § 1029 (for peace officers).

Documentation and Reporting

Commission Regulations 1953(g) and 1959(g)

The documentation and reporting requirements provide detailed specifications on information to be maintained in the background investigation file. It specifies that there must be sufficient information for the reviewing authority to make a COE, that supporting documents must be originals or true, current, and accurate copies, and that these documents must be available during POST compliance inspections. For peace officers, it also requires that a Verification of Qualification for Peace Officer Appointment (POST 2-355) be completed. Referencing related statutes and case law, this regulation also addresses retention requirements and access by others involved in the hiring process, and by those conducting background investigations on behalf of other law enforcement/public safety dispatcher agencies. More detailed information is provided in Chapter 4: "The Background Investigation Process."

Disclosure Provisions: Differences and Similarities between Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers

There are statutory provisions that allow investigators greater access to background information of peace officer candidates, and other statutes that allow special access to information from past and current employers of both peace officers and public safety dispatchers. These include:

- Deferred Entry of Judgment – Penal Code § 1000.4\(a\) allows those who have successfully completed a deferred entry of judgment program to refrain from disclosing any arrest or criminal record associated with that offense. Public safety dispatcher candidates fall under this protection; however, Penal Code § 1000.4(c) specifically exempts peace officers (who must therefore disclose this information).
- Arrests and Detentions – Labor Code § 432.7 prohibits employers from considering an arrest or detention that did not result in a conviction, or a juvenile arrest, detention, processing, diversion, supervision, adjudication, or court disposition. However, Labor Code § 432.7(e)

(1) permits employers to consider this information in the case of persons already employed as peace officers or who are seeking employment as peace officers, or for persons seeking employment for positions in the DOJ or other criminal justice agencies as defined in Penal Code § 13101.

- Conviction History – Government Code § 12952 prohibits employers from inquiring or considering an applicant's conviction history prior to a COE. This includes arrests not followed by conviction, diversion programs, and convictions that are sealed, dismissed, expunged, or otherwise eradicated. However, Government Code § 12952(d)(1) provides that this provision does not apply to state and local agencies that are required by law to conduct a conviction history background check and Government Code § 12952(d)(2) provides that this provision does not apply in the case of applicants for positions with criminal justice agencies as defined in Penal Code § 13101.
- Compelled Disclosure of Employment Information – Government Code § 1031.1 establishes procedures by which employers are legally obligated to furnish specified information in peace officer and other law enforcement agency applicant (i.e., dispatcher) background investigations. For candidates with previous peace officer experience, Penal Code § 832.12 requires peace officer employers to maintain records of investigations of misconduct in a general personnel file or designated separate file; compels candidates to provide written permission to view the files; and requires hiring departments to review the records. Penal Code § 832.7 requires departments to release certain personnel records of peace officers.

These disclosure provisions should serve to caution investigators against making unnecessarily invasive inquiries, especially of dispatcher candidates. Other statutory protections may bar consideration of specified criminal processes for either peace officer or public safety dispatcher candidates i.e., those records sealed following a finding of factual innocence pursuant to Penal Code [§ 851.7 or Penal Code § 851.8]. But note, records expunged and sealed pursuant to Penal Code § 1203.425 are accessible by criminal justice agencies as defined in Penal Code § 851.92 and may be accessed and, under Penal Code § 1203.425(a)(4)(C), may be used by criminal justice agencies to the same extent as if relief under Penal Code § 1203.425 had not been granted. Close consultation with the agency's legal counsel is critical to determine if and to what extent these exceptions may or may not apply.

The Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), and the California Investigative Consumers Reporting Agencies Act (ICRAA) outline specific disclosure requirements when using third parties (e.g., contracted investigators) for conducting background investigations.²⁴ California courts have also shown a certain amount of inconsistency when addressing a given candidate's rights to inspection of information contained in their pre-employment background investigation file. These are, therefore, also areas where close consultation with the agency's legal counsel is critical.

PRIVACY AND CONFIDENTIALITY LAWS

Article 1 of the California Constitution grants the citizens of the state the right of privacy. As a result, prospective employers are specifically prohibited from asking for unnecessarily intimate or personal information; they are also required to use the least invasive mean necessary to gather any intrusive information that can be justified as necessary. Generally, the more intimate or personal the information, the more justified the expectation that it will not be subject to public scrutiny.²⁵

²⁴ See FCRA (15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.), ICRAA (California Civil Code §§ 1786.10 - 1786.40), and POST Bulletin 2024-08.

Despite privacy protections, courts have paid great deference to the need for intrusive questioning of law enforcement applicants, and peace officer applicants in particular, in light of the serious and often dangerous nature of the job and the inherent responsibility for carrying a firearm and protecting the public. However, this deference has been shown to have limits. For example, in Thorne v. City of El Segundo,²⁶ the court sided with a rejected peace officer applicant who was asked questions about her extra-marital affairs, abortions, and other “private, non-job-related considerations.”

In addition to limiting information to only that which is necessary, agencies must also establish procedures and precautions to prevent unwarranted disclosure of private and otherwise sensitive information. All information provided by the applicant in the PHS and throughout the background investigation is private and should be treated as confidential. No portion of the investigation should be revealed to persons other than those who are specifically authorized to receive and evaluate the results.

California law also protects the privacy rights of those who provide confidential information for investigative or employment purposes. These rights are described in detail in connection with contacting references in Chapter 5: “Areas of Investigation and the POST Personal History Statements.”

Procedures that treat questionnaires in a confidential fashion are necessary to ensure that privacy interests of applicants and employees are maintained.²⁷ All confidential information should be maintained in a secure filing cabinet, with access limited to those involved in the employment decision.

CONFIDENTIALITY VS. LEGAL PRIVILEGE

Under California law, certain communications made, without malice, in the course of a legally mandated background investigation may enjoy an “absolute” or “qualified privilege.”²⁸ This does not mean that someone cannot be sued over a privileged communication; it means that they are unlikely to be successfully sued.

Privilege should not be confused with confidentiality. While certain statutes, such as the California Information Practices Act²⁹ and even the ICRAA³⁰ restrict disclosure of personal information of individuals contacted during the course of a background (except as specified in those acts), not all information is legally protectable in subsequent civil or criminal proceedings.

It is, therefore, unwise to promise confidentiality that does not exist in the law. However, strong arguments exist that background investigators’ sources of information should be protected, as well as any information that could identify those sources.³¹

²⁸ A communication protected as “privileged publication or broadcast” is defined in Civil Code § 47\(c\) and includes communications “concerning the job performance or qualifications of an applicant for employment, based upon credible evidence, made without malice, by a current or former employer of the applicant to, and upon request of, one whom the employer reasonably believes is a prospective employer of the applicant.”

EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION LAWS AND REGULATIONS

There are ever-increasing numbers of laws and regulations – both federal³² and state³³ - that govern the personnel practices of all employers, including Title VII of the Civil Rights Act \(CRA\) of 1964 (as amended), the Age Discrimination in Employment Act \(ADEA\) of 1967, the Americans with Disabilities Act \(ADA\) of 1990, and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act \(FEHA\). They all share a common purpose: to prohibit unfair discrimination in employment and provide equal opportunity for all. Unfair discrimination occurs when employment decisions are based on any protected class, including, but not limited to, race, color, religion, sex, national origin, gender, ethnicity, national ancestry, age (40 and over), disability, pregnancy, genetic information, medical condition, marital status, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, or military or veteran status, rather than on job-relevant knowledge, skills, abilities, and other characteristics.

Unfair discrimination can take two forms: Disparate Treatment or Disparate Impact. Disparate treatment occurs when an applicant from a protected class is treated differently than other applicants during the hiring process. Employers are vulnerable to allegations of disparate treatment when their selection inquiries and practices are inconsistent.

Background investigators should carefully evaluate the relevance of their inquiries to the ability of the applicant to perform the functions of the position. Although there are certain allowances for screening peace officer and other public safety applicants, certain questions are ill-advised unless they are sufficiently related to the applicant's ability to perform the functions of the position.

Certain questions should be avoided altogether. For example, asking applicants questions such as “What is your religion?” “What church do you attend?” “What is your political affiliation?” “Are you a homosexual?” “What is your race?” “Are you pregnant?” “Do you plan to have children? If so, when?” invite charges of discrimination and intentional, disparate treatment.

Disparate impact occurs when a seemingly neutral standard or practice results in a substantially different rate of selection that works to the disadvantage of members of a protected class.³⁴ For example, a height standard can disqualify a disproportionate percentage of women and certain minorities; standards related to credit history or arrest records tend to target certain minorities in disproportion to their percentage of the population. Any selection procedure that causes disparate impact may only be used if it can be demonstrated that it is job-related and consistent with business necessity (i.e., essential to the safe and efficient operation of the agency).

Although these laws impose restrictions on the types of information that can be collected, the timing of investigations, and the manner in which decisions can be made and justified, it is important to remember that no federal or state statute, court decision, or binding public policy requires an employer to hire unqualified persons or to lower job relevant, legitimate employment standards. The most important way to ensure that the background investigation process is legally acceptable is to focus only on that which is necessary for determining if a candidate meets lawful position requirements and standards. Background investigators must therefore be fully familiar with and able to articulate all aspects of the job in question and the relationship to their inquiries. Agency policy should ensure consistency in the manner in which background information is collected and evaluated, while allowing for flexibility to handle each applicant individually, as necessary.

³³ <https://calcivilrights.ca.gov/employment/#whoBody>

³⁴ A rule of thumb is that disparate impact is normally indicated when the selection rate for one group is less than 80% (4/5) that of another.

DISABILITY DISCRIMINATION LAWS AND REGULATIONS

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

Confidentiality is never more important than when dealing with medical and disability-related information. In fact, the manner in which disability-related information is acquired, evaluated, and treated is the focus of the federal Americans with Disabilities Act \(ADA\) of 1990 and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act \(FEHA\). The purpose of both of these statutes is to prohibit discrimination against qualified individuals with disabilities in hiring and any other aspect of employment.

While a full explanation of these laws and their implications for employment procedures in general is far beyond the scope of this manual, a brief description of ADA/FEHA and how it may affect background investigations is provided below. In addition, background investigators are urged to consult with their legal counsel and/or ADA coordinator whenever disability-related issues arise.

The ADA and FEHA are NOT identical. Federal and state disability laws differ in terms of who is considered “disabled” (and therefore protected), what can be asked after a conditional job offer is extended, and in other ways. In general, the California FEHA affords more protection than the ADA, although the Americans with Disabilities Act Amendments Act of 2008 (ADAAA) brought many of its provisions closer to those specified in California law. Where there are differences between the two laws, the one that provides the most protection to individuals with a disability or medical condition prevails, and it will be those provisions that are discussed below with respect to their impact on background investigations.

Who Is Protected

To be protected by ADA/FEHA, individuals must: 1) have a physical or mental disability or medical condition and 2) be “otherwise qualified” to perform the essential functions of the job (with or without reasonable accommodations, if necessary). Individuals have a disability or medical condition if they have a physical or mental impairment that limits one or more major life activities, a record of such impairment, or are regarded as having an impairment. Current illegal drug use (either the use of illegal drugs or unlawful use of legal drugs) is not covered by these laws. However, individuals who have a history of drug addiction/dependence are. Both current and past alcoholism are protected conditions.

Who Is Not Protected

The following conditions are not considered disabilities under the ADA (42 U.S.C. § 12211):

- Transvestism, transsexualism, pedophilia, exhibitionism, voyeurism, gender identity disorders not resulting from physical impairments, or other sexual behavior disorders;
- Compulsive gambling, kleptomania, or pyromania; or
- Psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from current illegal use of drugs.

Similarly, the FEHA exempts sexual behavior disorders, compulsive gambling, kleptomania, pyromania, or psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from the current unlawful use of controlled substances or other drugs from its definition of “disability.” See GC [§ 12926\(j\), \(m\)\(6\)]

Normal-range characteristics and attributes are not limitations and, therefore, are also not included in the ADA/FEHA definition of “disability.” These include physical characteristics such as eye color, hair color, left-handedness, or height, weight, or muscle tone that are within normal range and are not the result of a physiological disorder, as well as common personality traits, such as poor judgment, a quick temper, or general stress due to job pressure.

No matter the nature of an applicant's disability, applicants must also be otherwise qualified in order to be protected by these statutes. To be otherwise qualified, applicants must first meet all statutory and other minimum qualifications. Prior to any adverse determination, law enforcement agencies should perform an individualized assessment of the applicant's prior conduct (e.g., deception, history of criminality) to determine if the applicant is otherwise qualified.³⁵

Individuals must also be able to do the job, with or without reasonable accommodation. They must be able to do the job without posing a direct threat, which is defined as a significant risk of substantial harm to themselves or especially to others (and the threat cannot be reduced by reasonable accommodation). The determination as to whether someone poses a direct threat must be based on the medical facts of the situation, rather than merely fear or speculation.

Essential Job Functions

Doing the job is defined as being able to perform the essential functions. Essential functions are those duties that are considered fundamental (as opposed to marginal) to the position. Employers have the right and the responsibility for identifying the essential functions of the position to serve as the basis for determining applicants' suitability for employment. It is, therefore, imperative that agencies create and maintain accurate job descriptions, and that background investigators become familiar with these descriptions so that there is a shared, explicit understanding of what it takes to be able to do the job.

In addition to agency job descriptions, POST has conducted analyses of both the peace officer and public safety dispatcher jobs. The resulting descriptions of the duties, tasks, and demands of these jobs are discussed in POST publications such as the Peace Officer Job Analysis, the Patrol Officer Physical Demands Study, and the Public Safety Dispatcher Job Analysis Validation Report.³⁶

Based in part on these analyses, POST identified attributes and characteristics critical to the safe, effective job performance of both peace officers and public safety dispatchers, and amenable to assessment in the background investigation. The resulting POST background dimensions are fully described in Chapter 2, "Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher Background Investigation Dimensions."

Reasonable Accommodation

A reasonable accommodation includes making modifications or adjustments that will enable an employee to perform the essential functions of the job the employee holds or desires. See 2 [CCR § 11065(p) and 29 Code of Federal Regulations § 1630.2(o).] Reasonable accommodations can take many forms, ranging from allowing extra time on a written test, providing regular breaks to allow an employee to take medications, to allowing a student to use a light or smaller handgun.

Reasonable accommodation is one of the cornerstones of ADA/FEHA, but it is a legally complicated concept and one unlikely to emerge during most of the background investigation process. However, should an applicant request reasonable accommodation, a background investigator is well-advised to contact the agency's ADA coordinator or other appropriate personnel. It is sufficient here to emphasize that: 1) providing reasonable accommodation is a statutory obligation of employers, unless the accommodation would cause an undue hardship to the agency; and 2) decisions surrounding the choice and implementation of any accommodation should be based on individualized assessment, resulting from a constructive discussion (i.e., interactive process) with the disabled individual and, when necessary, an appropriate healthcare professional.

THE CONDITIONAL OFFER OF EMPLOYMENT: PRE- AND POST-OFFER INQUIRIES

Another cornerstone of the ADA and FEHA is the separation of the pre-employment process into two stages, punctuated by a COE. For the COE to be considered “bona fide” (i.e., real), employers must evaluate all relevant non-medical information that they reasonably can obtain and analyze prior to extending the offer.³⁷ In other words, “an employer must have either completed all non-medical components of its application process or be able to demonstrate that it could not reasonably have done so before issuing the offer...” 2 CCR [§ 11071\(b\).]

An example of such a conditional offer is included in Appendix B – Sample B.1. As reflected in this example, the COE itself should state that the applicant has provisionally passed the background investigation, and that additional background information may be investigated at the post-offer stage which could, if warranted, result in the withdrawal of the job offer.

The Pre-Conditional Offer Stage

Prior to extending the applicant a COE, no disability-related inquiries can be asked on forms or in interviews, nor can such information be sought from third parties (e.g., past employers, references). Disability-related questions include asking applicants if they have had a particular disability or suffered from a mental condition. Questions about a history of worker’s compensation claims or job-related injuries are also forbidden pre-offer, since these types of questions may elicit disability-related information. General questions that are likely to elicit disability-related information are also prohibited pre-offer, such as, “What impairments do you have?” “Have you ever been hospitalized?” or “What medications do you take?”

At the pre-offer stage, it is acceptable at any time to ask applicants about employment history, including questions about the circumstances of any gaps or sudden departures from employment. This is permitted even if the applicant was unemployed or terminated because of disability-related reasons. It is also permissible to ask pre-offer questions about previous attendance records (e.g., “How many days were you absent from your last job?”). Although it is not permissible to ask pre-offer questions about the number of days an applicant missed work in a previous job due to illness, it is legal to ask questions involving abuse of leave (e.g., “How many Mondays and Fridays were you absent last year other than approved time off?”).

A history of drug addiction or dependence is considered a disability; therefore, questions that could reasonably be expected to elicit this information are prohibited, such as “Have you ever been addicted to drugs?” or “Have you ever been treated for drug addiction?” Questions that address extent of past drug use are also prohibited, such as “How many times have you used illegal drugs in your life?” or, “How often did you use illegal drugs in the past?”

Current illegal use of drugs does not fall under the protection of the ADA/FEHA; however, there is no clear-cut definition of “current;” rather, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) merely states that “current” is to be considered “...recently enough to justify an employer’s reasonable belief that involvement with drugs is ongoing.”³⁸ The POST PHS uses six months as a benchmark for questions on current illegal drug use; however, this time frame is intended as a rule of thumb rather than a legally sanctioned standard.

³⁷ ADA Enforcement Guidance: Pre-Employment Disability-Related Questions and Medical Examination, U.S. EEOC, October 1995.

Individuals with a past history of recreational or casual drug use also fall outside the protection of the law. Therefore, narrowly defined questions about past drug use that do not address frequency or extent of use are permissible pre-offer. The POST PHS include examples of such questions.³⁹ Any additional pre-offer questions on this topic should not be considered without the input of legal counsel.

Unlike illegal drug use, current and past alcoholism are protected. Therefore, alcohol tests are prohibited prior to the COE. No pre-offer questions may be asked regarding the extent of the applicant's use of alcohol or other aspects of alcoholism. For example, applicants may not be asked pre-offer how much they drink. However, questions about social use of alcohol are permissible, as are inquiries about their (job-relevant) behavior, even if that behavior was a result of drunkenness. For example, it is legal to ask about DUIs pre-COE, as well as whether they have been late to or absent from work because of alcohol (or drug) use.

The Post-Conditional Offer Stage

After a COE has been extended, medical and disability related inquiries and examinations are permissible. However, all such questions must be job-related and consistent with business necessity, and all applicants must be subjected to the same basic inquiries. Note that a job offer revoked at this stage may be assumed to be due to disability-related reasons; therefore, an employer may be required to show that the applicant is unqualified or poses a direct threat.

Medical and other disability-related information must be treated with extreme confidentiality.⁴⁰ Screening physicians, psychologists, and even background investigators should only disclose such information to others involved in the hiring process (including each other) on a need-to-know basis. This information must be kept confidential and stored in a separate, secure medical file — not with the employee's regular personnel file. Access by others should be strictly limited. The law allows access to this type of information by only a few selected individuals, including: 1) supervisors or managers, who may be informed about necessary restrictions on the work or duties of an employee and necessary accommodations, 2) first-aid and safety personnel, who may be informed if a disability will require emergency treatment, 3) government officials investigating compliance with ADA/FEHA, and 4) state workers' compensation fund employees or representatives of insurance companies.⁴¹

BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION INQUIRIES: PRE- OR POST-OFFER?

The sequencing of most phases of the hiring process is clear-cut: Written tests and oral interviews must be conducted pre-offer, since they do not address medical or other disability issues. On the other hand, medical and psychological evaluations must be deferred until the post-offer phase.

Situating the background investigation is another matter. On the one hand, the determination of good moral character would not appear on its surface to require inquiries into medical, psychological, or other disability-related areas. As such, a background investigation should be conducted prior to the COE.

In reality, however, the background investigation can and does include inquiries prohibited at the pre-

³⁹ In January 2024, Section 12954 was added to the Government Code which makes it unlawful for an employer to discriminate against a candidate who has used cannabis off the job and away from the workplace. It further makes it unlawful for employers to ask candidates about prior cannabis use; therefore, POST revised the Personal History Statements (2-251 and 2-255) to remove references to prior cannabis use (see POST Bulletin 2023-67).

⁴¹ Note that access to this information does not include candidates themselves.

offer phase. Prohibited topics include histories of legal and illegal substance abuse (both drugs and alcohol), behaviors resulting from problems with stress tolerance and other psychological stability concerns and learning disabilities as they relate to educational and employment history, to name a few. Disability-related information may be divulged by the candidates themselves, as well as by the numerous references contacted during the investigation, including past and current employers, family members, friends, roommates, neighbors, etc. However, at the pre-offer stage, background investigators are legally barred from pursuing this line of questioning, regardless of job-relevance or business necessity.

The regulations associated with both the ADA and FEHA include a provision allowing for the deferral of certain non-medical or non-psychological inquiries until the post-offer stage if it can be demonstrated that the information could not have reasonably been collected prior to the COE. POST submitted a written request to the EEOC for guidance on the proper interpretation of this provision with respect to the sequencing of peace officer background investigations.

Specifically, POST asked about the permissibility under the ADA of deferring to the post-offer phase those parts of the peace officer background investigation that do not involve medical or other disability-related inquiries.

In their response, the EEOC stipulated that, at a minimum, official documents such as DMV records, birth certificates, and credit reports must be requested at the pre-offer stage, since the information in these documents does not touch on medical or other prohibited topics and they are readily obtainable. However, the EEOC agreed with POST that other aspects of the peace officer background investigation could lawfully be deferred until the post-offer phase, including (1) the receipt and evaluation of official documents that cannot be obtained in a timely manner, and (2) contacts and interviews with references, if this information could not have reasonably been collected prior to the COE. The exchange between POST and the EEOC is available at https://post.ca.gov/Portals/0/post_docs/bulletin/2008-22.pdf.

To ensure that the guidance offered by the EEOC was consistent with the treatment of peace officer background investigations under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, POST initiated a legislative change that resulted in the addition of Government Code § 1031.2:

“Consistent with the [ADA] and [FEHA], the collection of non-medical or non-psychological information of peace officers, in accordance with a thorough background investigation, as required by subdivision (d) of § 1031, may be deferred until after a conditional offer of employment is issued if the employer can demonstrate that the information could not have reasonably been collected prior to the offer.”

Although Government Code § 1031.2 only applies to peace officer candidates, state disability discrimination laws otherwise indicate that in order for “a job offer to be bona fide, an employer must have either completed all non-medical components of its application process or be able to demonstrate that it could not reasonably have done so before issuing the offer...” (2 CCR § 11071).

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: We have reviewed the candidate’s application and Personal History Statement form, is that sufficient to be able to offer them a COE?

A: For the COE to be considered “bona fide” (i.e., real), employers must evaluate all relevant non-medical information that they can reasonably obtain and analyze prior to extending the offer.⁴²

⁴² ADA Enforcement Guidance: Pre-Employment Disability-Related Questions and Medical Examination, U.S. EEOC, October 1995 and 2 CCR § 11071, 29 CFR § 1630.14\(b\).

Q: What if the applicant or another individual volunteers disability-related information at the pre-offer stage?

A: The background investigator may discover protected information pre-offer, either because an applicant (or others) volunteer disability-related information, or during record reviews. If disability-related information is discovered pre-offer, background investigators may document the information and follow-up and/or disclose it to the appropriate person (e.g., physician, psychologist) after a COE is extended. It is unlawful to use that information as a reason for not hiring the person unless the employer can provide a legal defense. Any background-relevant queries that may reveal medical and/or are disability-related issues can and must be deferred until after the COE pursuant to Government Code § 1031.2 and state and federal disability laws.

Q: How long must an agency wait for documents to be received before being able to extend a COE and continue with the background investigation?

A: There's no exact answer to this question, but in their letter to POST, the EEOC stated, "An unreasonable delay may exist where a responding agency routinely takes several weeks or months to provide documents and waiting for these official documents will significantly increase the length of the entire hiring process." Therefore, it would be lawful to extend a COE if documents such as a DD-214, official transcripts, or returns from DOJ or FBI fingerprint checks take more than a few weeks to receive.

Q: Are there any risks or disadvantages of conducting parts of the background investigation post-offer?

A: Deferring too much of the background investigation to the post-offer stage could trigger allegations of violation of the ADA and FEHA, which require that employers "either have completed all non-medical components of its application process or be able to demonstrate that it could not reasonably have done so before issuing the offer" 2 CCR [§ 11071\(b\)].

In addition, since medical and other related topics cannot be addressed until after a COE is extended, it would be difficult for a candidate to argue that they were discriminated against on the basis of their disability when the majority of the background investigation is conducted pre-offer. If the candidate is disqualified on the basis of a background investigation that was conducted post-offer, the agency should be prepared to defend the decision against assertions of disability discrimination.

Q: Does Government Code § 1031.2 permit the medical and psychological evaluation to be conducted pre-offer?

A: No. The medical and psychological evaluations, in compliance with the ADA, FEHA, Government Code § 1031\(f\), and POST regulations, must be conducted post-offer. Further, the psychological evaluation is contingent upon receiving personal history information, including the background narrative report and any other relevant personal history information Regulation [1955\(e\)\(3\)]. Thus, the psychological evaluation could not be conducted prior to completion of the background.

Peace officer training requirements are addressed separately in Commission Regulations 1005 and 1007. All POST documents and forms mentioned in these regulations are available on the POST website (www.post.ca.gov).
- (1) (1) Every POST-participating department and/or agency (hereinafter referred to as “department”) shall ensure that every “peace officer candidate,” as defined in subsection 1950(b), satisfies all minimum selection requirements specified in the following regulations unless waived by the Commission on a case-by-case basis. Statutory requirements in these regulations cannot be waived by the Commission.
- Reading and Writing Ability Assessment (Commission Regulation 1951)
 - Oral Interview (Commission Regulation 1952)
 - Background Investigation (Commission Regulation 1953)
 - Medical Evaluation (Commission Regulation 1954)
 - Psychological Evaluation (Commission Regulation 1955)
- (2) All requirements specified in these regulations shall be satisfied prior to the date of employment. For purposes of these regulations, “date of employment” is defined as date of appointment as a peace officer or, at the department’s discretion, the date the candidate is hired as a peace officer trainee and enrolled in a POST-certified Basic Course.

Note: By specifying that the selection standards must be completed either before appointment as a peace officer or the date the candidate is hired as a peace officer trainee, agencies who use the peace officer trainee classification will not have to rescreen these individuals if more than one year has elapsed between the date of evaluation and date of peace officer appointment.

(b) Peace Officer Candidate Definition

For purposes of these regulations, a “peace officer candidate” is any individual, regardless of rank or Penal Code classification, who applies for a peace officer position with a POST-participating department, regardless of the individual’s prior law enforcement experience either at that department or at a different department within the same city, county, state, or district.

Note: POST selection standards apply to all peace officers in POST-participating agencies: new hires, certain rehires/reappointments, laterals, seasonal, temporary, full-time, and part-time.

(c) Exceptions

For purposes of these regulations, peace officers described in this section are not considered “candidates” and are therefore exempted from Commission Regulations 1951-1955.

- (1) The department has sole responsibility for determining what, if any, assessments are necessary for a peace officer who:
 - (A) Changes peace officer classifications, such as from reserve officer to regular officer, within the same POST-participating department if documentation is available for inspection verifying that all current minimum selection requirements were previously met, and the peace officer has worked continuously for the department since the time of initial appointment.
 - (B) Is employed by a department that, through reorganization, is merged with another department within the same city, county, state, or district, if documentation is available for inspection verifying that the officer was hired in accordance with the POST requirements in effect at the time of hire.
 - (C) Is reappointed to the same POST-participating department within 180 days of voluntary separation.

Note: Departments have sole responsibility for ensuring the 180-day re-hires meet the Government Code and/or other statutory requirements, which includes GC § 1029. For experienced officers, GC § 1029 requires checks of the NDI, their POST profile, and any POST certification actions.

- (2) For a peace officer who has been mandatorily reinstated, the department shall:
 - (A) Report the reinstatement to POST in accordance with Commission Regulation 1003\(b\)\(2\);

Title 18 § 922\(d\)\(9\)]. Fingerprints do not need to be resubmitted if the officer was never removed from the department's peace officer files of the DOJ or FBI
 - (C) Perform a records check of the California Department of Motor Vehicles (VC § 12500);

- (3) Publicly elected peace officers are exempted from Commission Regulations 1951-1955.

(d) Adoption of Additional Requirements and/or Higher Standards

Per Government Code § 1031\(g\) and Penal Code § 13510\(d\), the adoption of more rigorous requirements, higher standards, additional assessments and/or more in-depth evaluations than those stated in these regulations is at the discretion of the employing department.

Note: Additional screening requirements (e.g., physical ability testing, detection of deception examinations) are the responsibility of the department, based on their peace officers' job functions, responsibilities, and demands.

- (3) Personal History Information. Personal history information includes the candidate's relevant work, life, and developmental history based on information collected during the background investigation [Commission Regulation 1953(g)(3)]. This includes the background narrative report and any other relevant background information including, but not limited to, documentation obtained through the social media search [Commission Regulation 1953(e)(12)]. - (4) Psychological Interview. A psychological interview shall be administered to each peace officer candidate subsequent to a review and evaluation of the results of the written assessments [subsection 1955(e)(2)] and the candidate's personal history information [subsection 1955(e)(3)]. Sufficient interview time shall be allotted to address all issues arising from the reviewed information and other issues that may arise during the interview.
- (5) Psychological Records. Psychological records and relevant medical records shall be obtained from the candidate's treating health professional, if warranted and obtainable. This information may be provided by the candidate, or, with written authorization from the candidate (Civil Code § 56.11), may be obtained directly from the health professional.

- (1) Data from all sources of information shall be considered; the evaluator's determination shall not be based on one single data source unless clinically justified.
- (2) The evaluator shall provide the department with their findings from the bias assessment [subsection 1955(d)(3)] and identify the data sources relied upon for their findings, including information obtained through the background investigation [Commission Regulation 1953(g)(3)].

Prior to appointment as a peace officer, the candidate must be determined to be psychologically suitable.

Note: *The candidate must be found psychologically suitable prior to appointment. The use of POST form 2-364, Psychological Suitability Declaration, is mandated as of October 2023. The completed form must be included in the background file.*

- (4) The department shall maintain the psychological suitability declaration in the candidate's background investigation file; the declaration shall be available to POST during compliance inspections.

- (d) Nothing in this section shall prohibit a local agency from establishing selection and training standards that exceed the minimum standards established by the commission.

Minimum Selection Standards for Public Safety Dispatchers

Commission Regulations 1956–1960

Regulation 1956:

Public Safety Dispatcher Selection Requirements

- (a) The purpose of these regulations is to set forth the minimum public safety dispatcher selection standards as authorized by PC § 13510(c). Public safety dispatcher training requirements are addressed separately in Commission Regulation 1018(c). All POST documents and forms mentioned in these regulations are available on the POST website (<https://post.ca.gov/>).

- (1) Every department and/or independent communications agency (hereinafter referred to as "department") that participates in the POST Public Safety Dispatcher Program shall ensure that every "public safety dispatcher candidate" as defined in subsection 1956(b) satisfies all minimum selection requirements specified in the following regulations:

- Background Investigation (Commission Regulation 1959)
- Medical Evaluation (Commission Regulation 1960)

- (2) All requirements specified in these regulations shall be satisfied prior to the date of appointment as a public safety dispatcher.

(b) Public Safety Dispatcher Candidate Definition.

For purposes of these regulations, a "public safety dispatcher candidate" is any individual who applies for a full-time or part-time position that involves receiving emergency calls for law enforcement service and/or dispatching law enforcement personnel. This includes any individual who applies for a public safety dispatcher position with a POST-participating department regardless of the individual's prior public safety dispatcher experience either at that department or a different department within the same city, county, state, or district.

(c) Exceptions.

For purposes of these regulations, individuals described in this section are not considered "public safety dispatcher candidates" and are therefore exempted from Commission Regulations 1957-1960.

- (1) The department has sole responsibility for determining what, if any, assessments are necessary for a public safety dispatcher who:

- (2) For a public safety dispatcher who has been mandatorily reinstated to the department, the department shall:

- (3) A peace officer who is assigned to dispatcher duties.

(d) Adoption of Additional Requirements and/or Higher Standards.

The requirements described herein serve as minimum selection requirements. Per Penal Code § 13510(d), the adoption of more rigorous requirements, higher standards, additional assessments, and/or more in-depth evaluations than those stated in these regulations is at the discretion of the employing department.

Note: Additional requirements (e.g., detection of deception examinations, psychological evaluation) are at the discretion of the hiring department, based on their dispatchers' job functions, responsibilities, and demands.

Regulation 1957:

- The candidate must be found psychologically suitable prior to appointment.
- The psychologist must report their bias assessment findings to the hiring authority, and any additional information relevant to peace officer suitability, as necessary and appropriate.
- Any medical information must be kept in a separate, confidential medical file. (CC § 56.20.)
- Second-opinion rights of psychologically-rejected candidates per 2 CCR 11071\(b\)\(2\). Second opinion psychologist should meet POST CPE requirements. Agencies must provide relevant job and background information to candidates' second opinion evaluator, upon request. The ultimate manner of resolving differences rests with the hiring agency.

Table 3.3SUMMARY OF POST PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHER SELECTION STANDARDS:
REGULATIONS 1956–1960*1956: General Requirements

- The general requirements for dispatcher selection largely mirror those for peace officers.

1956(c): Exceptions

- Reinstated dispatchers are exempt from POST selection requirements; however, the department must submit a Notice of Appointment/Termination to POST with official reinstatement documentation, and fingerprints to DOJ and FBI.
- Dispatchers returning to the same department within 180 days of a voluntary separation are exempt.

1957: Verbal, Reasoning, Memory, and Perceptual Abilities

- Verbal, reasoning, memory, and perceptual ability scores from the POST Dispatcher test are transportable across agencies and have no shelf life.
- The agency establishes its own cut score for the POST Dispatcher test or other acceptable demonstration of verbal, reasoning, memory, and perceptual ability.

1958: Oral Communication Assessment

- Oral interview or other measure of oral communication abilities.
- Must be conducted prior to a conditional offer of employment.

1959: Background Investigation

Required areas of investigation include:

- Employment Eligibility: Citizenship, permanent resident or other employment authorization (as required by USCIS Form I-9).
- Education Verification: No minimum requirement (can be used to verify the accuracy of what is reported on the PHS and as a measure of several POST background dimensions – e.g., learning ability).
- Employment History Checks: Self-explanatory.
- Relatives/Personal References Checks: Self-explanatory.
- Dissolution of Marriage Check: For the same reasons as peace officer requirement.
- Military History: For the same reasons as peace officer requirement.
- Credit Records Check: As important for dispatchers as peace officers, since they have access to the California Law Enforcement Telecommunications System (CLETS).

1960: Medical Evaluation

- The evaluation must be conducted by a licensed physician or a licensed healthcare professional under the supervision of a licensed physician.
- The evaluation must be conducted on behalf of the department.
- Local agencies are responsible for developing medical screening procedures and criteria based on their dispatchers' duties, demands, and working conditions.
- Agencies must communicate the duties, demands, and working conditions to the physician.

- Results of medical evaluation are valid for one year.
 - Physicians must request information from treating physicians or other relevant health professionals, if warranted and obtainable.
 - The physician should report additional information relevant to peace officer suitability, as necessary and appropriate.
 - Medical history information must be collected from the candidate using the POST Medical History Statement (2-264) or alternative form.
 - The determination of the candidate's medical suitability must be made by the physician and reported to the department using the POST Medical Examination Report (2-265) or alternative form.
 - The medical suitability declaration must be in the background investigation file.
 - The physician should report additional information relevant to public safety dispatcher suitability, as necessary and appropriate.
 - Any medical information must be kept in a separate confidential medical file (CC § 56.20).
 - Second-opinion rights of medically rejected candidates per 2 CCR 11071(b)(2). POST requirement that agencies provide relevant job information to candidates' second opinion evaluators, upon request. The ultimate manner of resolving differences rests with the hiring agency.

THE BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION PROCESS

PRIOR TO INITIATING THE INVESTIGATION

Before beginning the investigation, the investigator should be fully familiar with the laws and regulations associated with conducting backgrounds. Effective July 1, 2023, investigators are required to complete POST-Certified background investigation training. Additional training is strongly advised, as discussed in Chapter 1.

Investigators also need to understand local policies and ordinances, agency standards, and their agency's needs and philosophy regarding the background investigation process. They need the ground rules regarding the resources (both human and other) committed to this process and a full understanding of what is expected of background investigators.

Agency procedures, resources, and priorities will have a significant impact on the manner in which background investigations can be conducted, including:

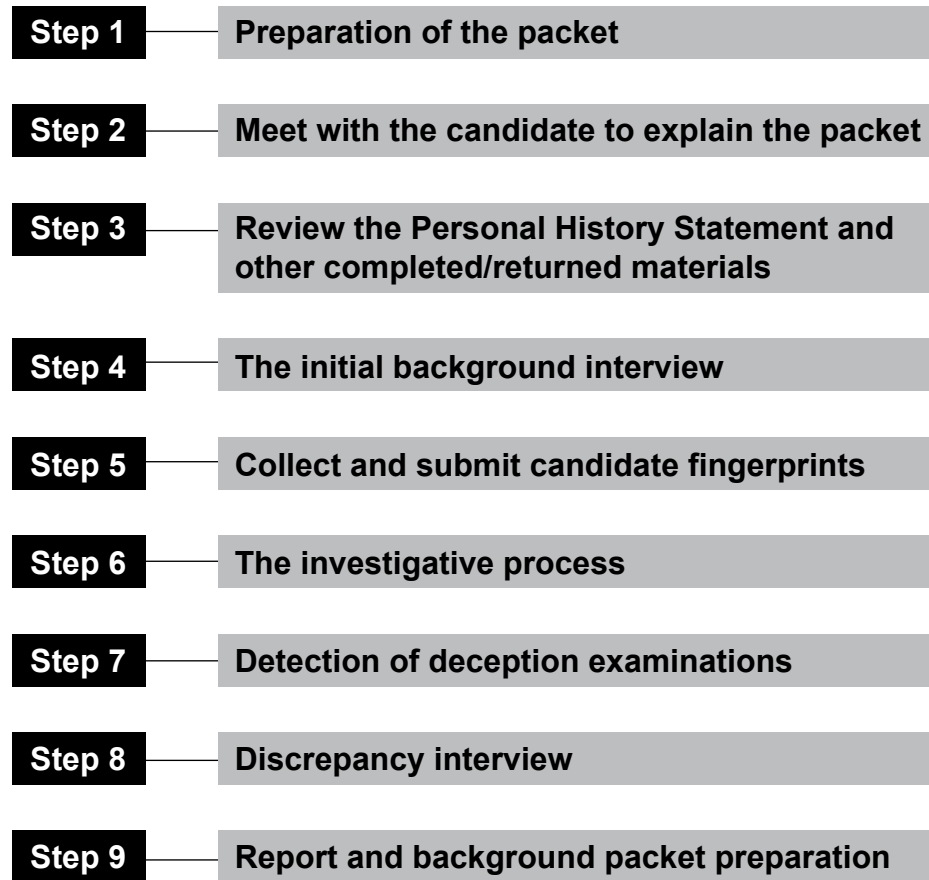

- 1) The amount of time available to complete the investigation,
- 2) The resources available for conducting background investigations,
- 3) Whether background investigations are a full-time assignment or an ancillary duty,
- 4) The extent to which the agency has clearly defined background and hiring policies,
- 5) Availability of clerical support,
- 6) Agency policy and POST regulations regarding interactions between the background investigator and others involved in the hiring process (i.e., the truth detection examiner, psychologist, or medical doctor), and
- 7) The background investigator's role in the hiring decision.

Investigators must also balance agency resources against the value of the background information to be gained. Geography, logistics, staffing, funding, and urgency all have an impact on available resources. The fewer resources available, the more important it is to choose wisely when investing time and effort in a specific situation. Careful planning is critical; investigators must learn to maximize the available time and personnel resources. For example, driving halfway across the state to speak with a manager at the local fast-food restaurant where a candidate worked eight or nine years ago may not be a very productive use of time.

THE BACKGROUND STEPS

The background investigation phases or "steps" are graphically represented in Figure 4.1 below. These steps pertain to the investigations of both peace officers and public safety dispatchers; however, the scope, depth, and necessity of a particular step may vary between these two classifications.

THE BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION PROCESS

Agencies have considerable latitude in how these steps are ordered and implemented, and even whether certain steps (e.g., detection of deception, discrepancy interviews) are performed at all. However, federal and state laws do restrict when certain phases of the hiring process can or must be conducted. As discussed in the previous chapter, medical and psychological examinations must be conducted post-offer. The sequencing of the background investigation with respect to the COE was discussed in the previous chapter and will be revisited later in this chapter.

Step 1Preparation of the Packet

The precise composition of a background packet will vary from agency to agency, based on department policies, guidance from the agency's legal counsel, and consultation with the agency's human resources (HR) or personnel department. At a minimum, the packet should include:

- Agency-specific information - hiring requirements and policies, detailed instructions, etc.
- A PHS (e.g., POST Forms 2-251/2-255 or local agency alternative⁴³) that the candidate must complete and return.

⁴³ The POST Personal History Statement is referenced throughout this chapter; however, other alternative personal history statements are acceptable. Effective July 1, 2024, use of the POST PHS-Peace Officer (2-251), or an exact replication of the questions from 2-251 from an electronic background platform, is required. Alternatives for the Public Safety Dispatcher PHS will still be acceptable.

- A list of documents (e.g., employment eligibility documents, age verification, high school transcripts) that the candidate is expected to furnish (and how and when they are to be furnished).
 - Multiple waivers and authorization forms, such as:
 - advisements regarding false statements (sample B.2 in Appendix B),
 - lateral advisements (samples B.3 and B.4 in Appendix B), and
 - authorization forms for release of information (samples provided in Appendix B).

NOTE: Actual agency advisements and forms should be on current department letterhead, reviewed by legal counsel, and notarized as necessary.

- Credit advisement form to comply with the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (CCRAA) (CC § 1785.20 and § 1785.20.5) and the Fair Credit Report Act (FCRA) (15 USC § 1681 et seq.) as needed. Note: The determination as to whether a CCRAA and FCRA consent form will be needed before obtaining credit information on a candidate is a legally complex subject. Agencies should seek guidance from their legal counsel as to the necessity of the form and for assistance in drafting the form.
- Disclosure notices and/or forms to comply with the Investigative Consumers Reporting Agencies Act (ICRAA) (CC § 1786 et seq.) and the FCRA (15 USC § 1681 et seq.). Note: The determination as to whether a consent form will be needed under the ICRAA and FCRA before conducting the background investigation and obtaining an investigative consumer report on a candidate is a complex legal issue. Agencies should seek guidance from their legal counsel as to whether a consent form is needed. Agencies should never attempt to devise these forms without very careful guidance from their legal counsel.
- Additional forms (e.g., blank supplementary questionnaires, child abuse and adult abuse reporting statements, drug policies).

Labor Code § 432 specifies that applicants are entitled, upon request, to copies of all application documents that they sign. Investigators should verify with their legal counsel as to whether this provision applies to their agency.

Investigators are unlikely to be charged with the responsibility for developing a background packet. Departmental forms, including blank waivers, are important documents that require the review and concurrence of the chain of command and the agency's legal counsel. Even the format/layout of official correspondence is commonly specified by the department head. However, investigators must bear responsibility for ensuring that departmental information is current and contains up-to-date contact information.

It may be useful to maintain complete electronic background packets for potential candidates. These packets can be placed online or provided electronically to the candidate. There are many advantages to electronic packets. First, needed changes can be made quickly and the warehousing of blank hard-copy packets can be minimized or eliminated. (Note: POST PHS forms are online.) Second, maintaining electronic packets allows the investigator to personalize each packet. By simply "searching and replacing," proper dates, names, and other needed identifying data can be inserted. Third, keeping an electronic master packet minimizes the likelihood that a needed form will be overlooked or misplaced from a hard-copy file. Fourth, if changes occur in the law, it is simple to update the file, rather than engage in the tedious process of replacing outdated items in an already-printed inventory.

Step 2

Meet with the Candidate to Explain the Packet

It is a good idea to meet with the candidate to present the background packet personally. By explaining each item in the packet, communication between the candidate and the investigator is fostered and confusion can be avoided. Investigators who question the need for this step do well to remember their own surprise when, as a candidate, they were first handed a background packet.

Candidates for employment as a peace officer or public safety dispatcher may never have been confronted with such a comprehensive application document.

At this initial meeting, agency-specific requirements or policies can be discussed, and each section of the PHS can be reviewed, emphasizing the need to be honest, thorough, and complete. The list of required documents should be reviewed as well. An agreed-upon time can be established for the candidate to return the completed documents. The investigator and candidate should exchange contact information, including cell phone numbers and email addresses.

Note that, although Labor Code § 450 prohibits employers from charging applicants for submitting job applications and related expenses, this statute may not pertain to costs borne by candidates for obtaining their own personal, official documents (e.g., transcripts, birth certificate). Therefore, it may be permissible to require candidates to pay and be responsible for acquiring these documents. If this issue arises, investigators should seek advice from legal counsel as to whether Labor Code § 450 applies.

Review the Personal History Statement and Other Completed/Returned Materials

Once the candidate has completed a background packet, the investigator should review the submitted materials. The completed PHS should be reviewed to establish that there are no immediately disqualifying factors (e.g., felony conviction for peace officer candidates, lack of employment eligibility, admitted current illegal drug use). Notes should be made of responses and issues that require attention in the earliest steps of the investigation, including during an initial background interview.

It is permissible to make copies of birth certificates, Certificates of Naturalization, and other official documents to include in the background investigation file. (Note: Only copies made with the intent to defraud are prohibited by law.) Copies must include a notation that the original or certified copy was inspected, the date of inspection, and the signature of the investigator.

DOCUMENT ANALYSIS

A typical background investigation may include 50 or more pages of documents, ranging from the PHS to copies of various releases to vital statistics documents, transcripts, credit reports, criminal histories, etc. The verification of all these documents can be challenging at best.

The analysis of original documents is far preferable to copies. The candidate should be required to bring original documents (or, in some cases, certified copies) to the investigator. If necessary, duplicates can be made, and the originals returned to the individual. If copies are made, the investigator must make a note that the originals were reviewed.

In general, there are three issues that must be addressed when analyzing a document:

- 1) Is it authentic? Does it look real?
- 2) Is the information consistent with other claims made by the candidate, and the information already submitted or uncovered in the background?

3) Is it sufficient, that is, does it provide legally acceptable proof?

If in doubt about a given document, the best advice is to check with the originating source. Virtually any official document can be verified by the agency or institution of issuance. However, this can be a very time-consuming process; therefore, there are a few checks that investigators can initially do themselves, for example:

- 1) the social security number provided can be matched against the number on the credit report,
- 2) the information on the driver's license can be checked against the information on the official driving record, and
- 3) the Selective Service registration number can be matched against the number obtained online.

Most documents submitted by candidates are what they say they are. The most common types of deficiencies involve documents that, although genuine, are not legally sufficient. Examples include:

- Ceremonial birth certificates from hospitals that, although real, are not legal birth certificates.
- School transcripts, although genuine, from unaccredited educational institutions, or are unofficial.
- Credit reports that are real, but over one year old.
- Automobile liability insurance cards that are real but expired, or that do not name the candidate as an insured.

Step 4

The Initial Background Interview

It is advisable to meet with the candidate to review the information. This interview may take place either during or after the review of the information by the investigator. This initial background interview allows the investigator to:

- Affirm with the candidate that documents are true, correct, and up-to-date,
- Explore reasons or explanations for curious, suspicious, or incomplete responses,
- Correct truly inadvertent errors or oversights, and
- Get an overall feel for the candidate.

If corrections are necessary, they can be made in one of several ways: 1) on a separate working copy, thereby preserving the original, 2) on the original document, but only in a different color of ink, or 3) by having the candidate submit supplementary sheets explaining each correction. Any changes made to an original document should be reviewed, initialed, and dated by the candidate. Available time and investigator/department preference dictate which of these options is best.

Agency policy will dictate the treatment and disposition of inaccurate or incomplete information. Some agencies have zero tolerance for such errors, insisting upon a correct and complete document the first time; others are more lenient.

Candidate responses that are vague, suspicious, or incomplete should be the focus of further questioning. This process will provide valuable insight into where the likely problems are to be found, thus allowing the investigator to begin prioritizing the focal points of the investigation.

It is recommended that this interview and all others be electronically recorded. Electronic recordings can be a valuable backup to the investigator's memory, especially in the event that a single investigator is handling multiple backgrounds. It also provides solid proof of what was asked and the content and manner of the answers. Candidates must be informed that interviews are being recorded.⁴⁴

The initial background interview is also an ideal time to have candidates execute all the necessary release and authorization forms. California law mandates that candidates be given, upon request, a copy of any document that they sign.⁴⁵

A signed, notarized, comprehensive, and valid authorization for the release of information can offset the reluctance of contacts and references to answer questions about others. Sample releases are provided in Appendix B; however, it is critical that the agency's legal counsel play an active role in the design, approval, and/or use of these forms. Unless otherwise specified, authorizations for release of information may only be valid for 30 days.⁴⁶

There may be circumstances where time or distance simply will not permit a face-to-face meeting between the investigator and the candidate. In this case, a telephone follow-up with the candidate and/or an interview utilizing Skype, Facetime, Zoom, or other video calling services may be the only means available.

INTERVIEWING

A very substantial part of the background investigation process consists of making contact with a wide variety of individuals, including the candidates and their relatives, references, acquaintances, neighbors, employers, military acquaintances, and others. All these individuals need to be interviewed. Ideally interviews should be face-to-face. If circumstances prevent in-person contact, then a video meeting or telephone interview would be the best alternatives. If real-time contact is impossible, then questionnaires may be sent via email. All contacts with references must be documented in the background investigation report.

The background process can be intimidating and intrusive to these interviewees, especially to the many candidates who have never experienced this depth of questioning. Although candidates must cooperate fully and openly with a lawful background investigation, investigators are wise to remember that the best candidates are likely to have many choices (e.g., law enforcement and otherwise). The interview should be seen as an opportunity to represent the agency favorably in addition to uncovering job-relevant information.

With certain narrow exceptions, others who are contacted during the process are under no obligation to cooperate; investigators must rely upon their good will to gather the needed information. Unlike a criminal investigation, many people contacted in the course of a background have no idea that they were going to be interviewed, nor do they have expectations regarding the nature of the investigation. Many will be reluctant to answer questions about others. The investigator's skill in gaining the cooperation of others is critical. The style and manner in which these individuals are approached and interviewed will very often make the difference between success and failure.

There are many useful publications and resources dealing with the subject of interviewing, as well as a POST-Certified course on Interviewing and Interrogation. It is beyond the scope of this manual to provide an in-depth discussion of effective interviewing. Presented below is a brief overview of some of the more important aspects of interviews that have the most direct bearing on the conduct of background investigation. Much of the information presented here was adapted from POST's "Interviewing Peace Officer Candidates: Hiring Interview Guidelines."

46 Cal. Civ Code § 1798.24\(b\) (specifying conditions of disclosure of information subject to the Information Practices Act). Note that the Information Practices Act applies primarily to state agencies. Local agencies should check with their own legal counsel to ensure compliance with other state and local laws.

PREPLANNING

By taking the time to prepare and ask job-related questions and focus the interview on candidate qualifications, investigators maximize the use of the time spent in the interview and send a powerful message to interviewees that they are serious about evaluating candidates carefully and selecting the best person for the job. This positive message reflects well upon the agency and can prove to be an effective recruitment device, as candidates appreciate employment practices that are thorough, job-related, and even-handed.

BEGINNING THE INTERVIEW

Establishing Rapport

Creating an accepting, open environment helps relieve the interviewees' anxiety, which in turn allows them to feel comfortable giving honest, candid answers. Therefore, building rapport can enhance the effectiveness of the interview by yielding more complete and accurate candidate information.

Open the interview session by greeting the individual with a sincere smile, lots of eye contact, and a firm handshake. Providing information about the background investigation can both serve as an icebreaker as well as ensure that interviewees understand the process and what is expected of them. If the interview is being electronically recorded, interviewees must be informed of and consent to the recording (PC § 632). They should be encouraged to respond candidly and completely to all questions, to provide specific examples of past behavior, when appropriate, and to ask for clarification if a question is unclear.

POSING QUESTIONS

Open Versus Closed Questions

Questions can vary by the type of response required of the candidate, ranging from a simple "yes" or "no" (closed questions) to an in-depth answer. In general, answers to closed questions (e.g., "Have you ever worked the night shift?") are often so short that they do not provide interviewers with sufficient, useful information. The result is that interviewers end up doing more talking in the interview than the candidate does. A "yes or no" question, for example, may require 15 to 20 words to ask, but only elicit a 1 to 3 words response. Therefore, open-ended questions are generally preferable.

Although they should be used sparingly, closed-ended questions do have their place in the background investigation. During the interview, they are useful for verifying facts, eliciting specific details, addressing questions arising from the candidate's written responses, or for checking minimum qualifications.

Open questions require candidates to provide specifics, details, and other information. These questions are useful in determining how well the candidates organize their thoughts and sometimes can reveal attitudes and feelings critical to effective job performance. They are generally more effective than closed-ended questions at developing insight into a candidate's experience and abilities.

QUESTION PHRASING

Regardless of format, all questions must be worded clearly, simply, and concisely. The candidate must understand what is being asked without having to second-guess or read between the lines.

Interviewers can have a significant influence over the responses of candidates based on the specific wording chosen to communicate the question. Leading questions indicate to the candidate the response that the interviewer wants. Leading questions include those in which the correct answer is fairly obvious (e.g., "How important is it for a peace officer to have integrity?") or implied by the way the question is phrased or delivered (e.g., "Would you be willing to use deadly force, if necessary?").

FOLLOW-UP/PROBING

Follow-up questions can serve three important functions: clarification, elaboration, and verification.

1) Clarification – Follow-up questioning may be necessary if the interviewee's response is vague, confusing, or indicates that they did not understand the question. Investigators should ask clarifying questions if they find themselves needing to make inferences or assumptions to fill in the gaps in the information provided. Sometimes clarifying questions may be as simple as repeating the initial question. Otherwise, clarifying follow-up questions typically begin with phrases such as "Could you explain again...," "Help me understand," or "What do you mean ...." It may also be appropriate to paraphrase what the individual said: "If I heard you correctly, here is what you said..."

2) Elaboration – An individual may provide a brief answer that needs to be expanded. In these situations, follow-up questions can be used to obtain more details. Sometimes a simple pause – saying nothing – will elicit a further response. Otherwise, probes such as "Tell me more about...," "Walk me through...," "Could you expand on...," or "Please provide an example" can prompt additional, necessary information. Even if the response was complete, at times it may be useful to request another example or other additional information to ensure a complete picture of the individual.

3) Verification – In an effort to present themselves in the best possible light, candidates may provide impressive but not necessarily complete and accurate responses. Asking follow-up questions to obtain details about how, who, when, and where will help interviewers separate what is being said from how it is being said, to ensure that they are not unduly influenced by candidate presentation skills alone. Pressing candidates and others for specifics allows the investigator to retain control of the interview by ensuring that the answers provided are complete, accurate, and in line with information the investigator sought.

INTERVIEWERS' NONVERBAL BEHAVIOR

Nonverbal behavior (e.g., eye movements, changes in posture, facial expressions) can communicate as much information to the individual as the questions themselves. An investigator's body language can either encourage or discourage information. There are several steps investigators can take to ensure that their nonverbal behavior creates an atmosphere in which the candidate will relax and talk more freely:

- Keep your eyes open and focused on the individual, especially when asking questions or when a candidate seeks clarification.
- Maintain an open, interested posture: face the person, do not cross your arms; lean forward when listening to candidate responses.
- Keep a cheerful expression: smile, never frown, grimace, or show confusion, disapproval, boredom, or impatience.
- Nodding your head indicates that you find the information useful and encourages the individual to continue, as does giving short verbal approval, such as “mm-hmm.”
- Speak at a reasonable, steady pace, using variation in voice loudness and tone to emphasize important points or requests and to keep communications sounding fresh and genuine.

DECEPTION IN THE INTERVIEW

Avoidance of eye contact, rapid blinking, and nervous body movements are commonly interpreted, particularly by experienced law enforcement officers, as signs of deception.

However, research has demonstrated that nonverbal behaviors are unreliable indicators of lying. For example, while some individuals do look away while lying, others increase their degree of eye contact. Fidgeting and other nervous body movements can be natural behavior for some and a natural reaction to the stress of the interview for others. Therefore, investigators should avoid drawing conclusions about an individual’s deceptiveness or other motives based on nonverbal behavior alone.

Step 5

Collect and Submit Candidate Fingerprints⁴⁷

Agencies differ as to when fingerprints are obtained and submitted to the FBI and the DOJ. Although Live Scan responses may return in 24 hours or less, problem records can take upwards of 30 days. Firearms clearance letters are mailed separately and may take several weeks to process.

For peace officer candidates, there will be three documents returned to the agency: 1) the criminal record return from the DOJ’s Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation, 2) the FBI criminal record return document, and 3) the DOJ firearms eligibility⁴⁸ clearance return. The first two documents will also be returned for public safety dispatcher candidates. Each one of the documents must be reviewed carefully to ensure that there is a clearance on the return document, as error messages transmitted to the employer via email look very similar to actual Live Scan reports. Therefore, investigators must carefully inspect these returns to avoid potential problems. Note that Live Scan defaults to checking only California records for nonsworn candidates. Therefore, investigators must ensure that FBI fingerprints are specifically requested for public safety dispatcher candidates.

⁴⁷ Fingerprinting is also discussed in the Legal section of Chapter 5, Areas of Investigation, and the POST Personal History Statements. Per PC § 11170\(b\)\(9\), peace officer candidates may also be screened through the California Child Abuse Central Index \(CACI\), but a separate inquiry is required. NOTE: A May 2022 state auditor’s report (2021-112) indicates that the CACI may contain incomplete data.

⁴⁸ Penal Code § 832.15 requires the California DOJ to “notify a state or local agency as to whether an individual applying for a position as a peace officer, ... authorized by the employing agency to carry a firearm, is prohibited from possessing, receiving, owning, or purchasing a firearm pursuant to state or federal law.” In very rare instances, the DOJ will send a letter to the agency indicating that they need to provide additional documentation regarding the individual’s ability to possess a firearm under federal law (See POST Bulletin 2023-62).

Any indication of criminal activity or a negative return must be thoroughly reviewed to determine compliance with Commission Regulations and agency selection standards. Additionally, pursuant to Penal Code § 11105\(t\), the agency must provide the candidate with a copy of their Criminal Offender Record Information (CORI), if it is a basis for an adverse employment decision. This information must be provided to the candidate regardless of the waivers signed by the candidate.

When responding to CORI requests pursuant to Penal Code § 11105\(k\) or \(l\), the DOJ will also provide the requested date and name of every agency that has previously requested a search of the candidate's pre-employment criminal history (PC § 11105.06).

Step 6

The Investigative Process

Each background investigation may take 40 or more working hours of an investigator's time. The investigative hours are likely to be spread out over many weeks, depending upon the candidate. Type of history, length of history, number of candidates, geographical history, available resources, and even competing demands on the investigator's time all have an impact on the length of time required.

Investigators should be aware of the available resources before embarking upon the investigation. Resource realities will dictate whether the investigation will focus on mailed or electronic inquiries, telephone calls, face-to-face interviews, or some combination thereof.

Regardless of the manner in which references are contacted, the investigator must determine who and how many individuals to contact. The following general guidelines may help:

- When determining the appropriate number of contacts, it is important to assess the expected value of the comments from a particular reference against the resources expended to get the information.
- Begin in the areas that appear to be the most time-consuming or an area that, if explored, is most likely to reveal information that will disqualify the candidate from further consideration. The areas will vary from candidate to candidate.
- Contact a diverse group of persons who know the candidate across a variety of contexts (e.g., home, school, work, socially, military). Often, the point of diminishing returns is reached when this type of diverse group echoes the same information about the candidate, both positive and negative. If significantly different information is revealed, or the contacts only know the candidate in a very limited context, more interviews would be appropriate.
- Contact with secondary references (e.g., those offered by the initial references that were identified by the candidate) is likely to yield different responses than those chosen by the candidate. Thus, it is imperative, and required by Commission Regulation 1953(e)(7)(A), that these potentially rich sources of information be contacted.

INTERNET SEARCHES AND SOCIAL MEDIA

Public Records and Cybersearching. Internet searches may provide quick and convenient access to many public records not easily inspected in person, provide background information on individuals who appear in the local media or other internet sources, and even assist in locating individuals and/or their employers when information furnished on a PHS is incomplete or out-of-date. However, the lure of cybersearching can easily result in countless valuable hours surfing for information of marginal use. An investigator must continuously balance the time available for the investigation against the potential value of information to be gained as a result of such searches.

It is also quite easy to spend excessive amounts of time and resources searching on subscription search engines (e.g., Accurint, Equifax, LexisNexis). When using commercial search engines, it is wise to identify the focus of the search beforehand and narrow inquiries to information that will be of maximum value (and not otherwise reasonably available at a lower cost). This practice is advisable even when accessing free search engines (e.g., Google, Yahoo).

While the internet generally provides for the quick and inexpensive transmission of information, it is not secure. Background investigators are generally in possession of huge amounts of highly personal and sensitive data concerning their candidates, and care must be exercised before this information is transmitted over the Internet.

Social Media and Cybervetting. The proliferation of social networking sites, video-sharing platforms, and online forums [e.g., Facebook, Instagram, YouTube, TikTok, X (formerly Twitter), Discord, Twitch, Reddit, Quora] provide additional insight into peace officer candidate behavior and suitability. Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(12\) requires that a social media search be conducted as part of the background investigation. Searches must address “statements, postings, and/or endorsements made by the candidate that are relevant to suitability for peace officer employment, including bias-relevant information...” and any public expression of hate made in an online forum, as defined in Penal Code § 13680\(g\)\(1\).

Inquiries should be limited to statements, postings, and/or endorsements made by the candidate, regardless of source, that are indicative of peace officer suitability. This may include evidence of illegal acts or activities, misconduct, dishonesty, involvement and/or engagement with hate groups,⁴⁹ or indicators of bias against individuals or groups based on actual or perceived characteristics including race or ethnicity, gender, nationality, religion, disability, or sexual orientation. It is also important to include relevant positive attributes to mitigate concerns with past behaviors, if/as necessary. In all cases, care must be exercised that the social media search does not include inquiries or assessments of protected conduct or classifications (e.g., race, gender, sexual orientation, religious or political affiliation, family medical history).

California, like several other states, limits an employer’s (or prospective employer’s) rights to inspect social media and the applicability of such statutes to public employers is not always clear-cut. For example, under Labor Code § 980, an employer may not ask an applicant or employee to disclose a username or password, to open an account in the employer’s presence, or to divulge any social media except as specified within its provisions. However, as Labor Code provisions generally do not apply to public employers unless specified and Labor Code § 980 does not specify that it applies to public employers, investigators should check with their agency’s legal counsel to determine whether this section or other state and federal privacy laws may apply.

Publicly available (i.e., open source) information does not hold the same restrictions and recent legislation⁵⁰ identified the need for peace officer background investigations to include a search of online forums for public expressions of hate. References and other resources (e.g., social friends, family, co-workers, neighbors, housemates) are also good sources of information about a candidate’s social media presence. In all cases, social media searches and results should be documented and verified.

In close consultation with a legal advisor, departments should develop a comprehensive cybervetting

49 The Anti-Defamation League (ADL) provides information on hate symbols and their significance (<https://www.adl.org/resources/hate-symbols/search>). As acknowledged by the ADL, the symbols should “be evaluated in the context in which they appear,” as some may have contradictory meanings. The Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) also provides information on extremist groups including links to information on hate groups (<https://www.splcenter.org/fighting-hate/extremist-files>). policy⁵¹ consistent with local, state, and federal rules and regulations. The use and development of such policies should focus on postings made by a candidate on social media sites, rather than attempts to access what may otherwise be confidential, private, and/or constitutionally protected information through a candidate's private social media accounts.

Step 7

Detection of Deception Examinations

The administration of pre-employment "detection of deception" examinations⁵² (e.g., polygraph, voice stress analysis) is not a POST requirement; rather, their use is a matter of agency discretion.

Agencies electing to conduct a detection of deception examination should do so based on a full understanding of the advantages and limitations associated with this procedure. The placement of the examination within the pre-employment screening process should be decided in consideration of federal and state disability statutes. The ADA/FEHA statutes prohibit pre-offer inquiries involving medical or psychological disabilities, including history of drug use and current or past alcoholism. This prohibition applies even if the agency outsources this step in the process. Agencies should carefully review the provisions of California law and relevant case law with respect to the use and permissibility of such examinations. Regardless of the timing of the detection of deception examination, inquiries into a candidate's family medical history are prohibited.⁵³

Step 8

Discrepancy Interview

A discrepancy interview may be held if inconsistencies or other issues arise during the conduct of the investigation that impact a candidate's employment eligibility. It is recommended that the investigator prepares for the meeting by writing a description of each issue to be discussed. At the start of the interview, the candidate should be provided with a copy of the written description of each discrepancy and given ample opportunity to provide a complete explanation for each identified issue. This interview is not the place to make any commitment to the candidate as to the outcome of the background investigation process.

It is highly recommended that all discrepancy interviews be audio or video recorded, with the knowledge of the candidate.⁵⁴ As discussed previously, this prevents misinterpretation or misrepresentation of what was said.

Step 9

Report and Background Packet Preparation

The heart of the background investigation is the completed package. Excellent investigative work needs to be competently, clearly, and defensibly documented. The background narrative report must clearly address all required areas of inquiry as they relate to the essential attributes as defined in the background dimensions. For peace officer candidates, the narrative report must have separate sections for the background dimensions, bias assessment information, and all 12 areas of investigation

51 POST Bulletin 2022-34 provides a list of FAQs and resources to assist departments with developing a cybervetting policy. The International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) Recruitment and Personnel also offers guidance through their Developing a Cybervetting Strategy for Law Enforcement \(.pdf\) publication. Since this is a national publication, relevant California laws should be considered when developing a policy.

52 Labor Code § 432.2, which prohibits the use of a polygraph, lie detector, or similar test by an employer for employment or prospective employer purposes is specifically not applicable to "the federal government or any agency thereof or the state government or any agency or local subdivision thereof, including, but not limited to, counties, cities and counties, cities, districts, authorities, and agencies."

54 Penal Code § 632.

as identified and sequentially ordered in Commission Regulation 1953(e). Although background investigators do not, nor should not, assess candidates for bias, they must provide findings of biased behaviors and/or evidence of bias-relevant traits and attributes in the background report provided to the employer and the screening psychologist. The Background Investigation Dimensions and the Bias Assessment Framework and associated guidance tables (see Chapter 2) will assist investigators in determining what information should be included in the background dimensions and bias assessment sections of the background narrative report.

Below are some general guidelines for writing effective reports:

- 1) Write for the reader! If the report cannot be understood, is too long, poorly written, or too confusing, it will not be read, and nothing is gained.
- 2) Do not bury critically important information.
- 3) Assume that everything in the report might ultimately be subject to discovery. Avoid including information that cannot be supported with facts or corroboration.
- 4) Impressions count. While investigators should avoid injecting personal bias into any official action, their ability to assess the credibility and/or motives of others is key to a successful background.
- 5) If it cannot be documented, it did not happen. Do not put the agency in a position of having to defend something that is not documented.
- 6) Always keep in mind the visibility and importance of the background report and the investigation itself. The decisions resulting from this report will affect the quality of the agency's workforce. Their safety and effectiveness may well depend on how well the investigation has been conducted and documented.

THE BACKGROUND PACKAGE

Commission Regulations 1953(g)(1) and 1959(g)(1) –Background Narrative Report – stipulate:

“The background investigator shall summarize the background investigation results in a narrative report that includes sufficient information for the reviewing authority to extend, as appropriate, a conditional offer of employment.”

The background narrative report is a comprehensive report of all relevant information discovered during the background investigation. All supporting documentation, including employment eligibility documents, returned questionnaires, DMV records, credit reports, social media printouts, and other relevant documentation, must be under the appropriate tabs in the background file.

For peace officer candidates, the narrative report must include a section for the Background Investigation Dimensions and include a separate section for any findings of behaviors, traits, and/or attributes that may be relevant to bias per the Bias Assessment Framework, including hate group affiliations/activities and/or hate speech [see Commission Regulation 1953(b)]. The report shall identify the data sources reviewed for the findings, regardless of weight given. The report must also include narrative information in order of, and consistent with, the required areas of investigation as identified in Commission Regulation 1953(e). Although not currently required, it may be beneficial to organize the dispatcher background narrative report in a similar manner.

To assist with meeting the narrative report requirements outlined in Commission Regulation 1953(g)(1), POST has developed a sample Background Narrative Report template and example report. Links to the forms are included in Appendix D. The modifiable Background Narrative Report template is included in the list of sample background forms (see Sample D.1.) Although the sequencing of information provided in the sample template adheres to POST requirements, the specific format of the template is not required. A completed sample narrative that depicts examples from various fictitious peace officer candidates is provided as Example D.1.

It is not uncommon for investigators to include candidate biographical information as part of the background report. As such, POST has developed a supplemental Candidate Biographical/Contact information template (see Sample D.2) and example (see Example D.2). This supplemental document depicts biographical information that is generally found on a candidate's personal history statement and/or through interviews with the candidate. It serves as a complement to the background narrative report; however, it is not required. Use of supplemental candidate biographical information is permitted as part of the background report provided that the background narrative sequencing of information continues to conform with Regulation 1953(g)(1).

The background narrative report, along with all supporting documentation obtained during the course of the background investigation, shall be included in the candidate's background investigation file. If using the POST background tabs, the comprehensive narrative report would be placed behind Tab A. All supporting documents shall be originals or true, current, and accurate copies as attested to by the background investigator and shall be placed behind the appropriate tabs. The background investigation file shall be made available during POST compliance inspections.

A typical completed background package includes:

- Completed and signed Verification of Qualification for Peace Officer Appointment (POST 2-355) form (peace officers)
- Comprehensive background narrative report
- Results of interviews
- Personal History Statement (PHS)
- Copies of relevant supporting documents, such as:
 - Employment eligibility documents
 - Fingerprint returns
 - DMV record(s)
 - Credit history report(s)
 - Reference questionnaires
 - Education records (e.g., official transcripts)
 - Marriage dissolution documents
 - Military records
 - Social media documentation (peace officers)
 - Medical/Psychological suitability declarations

These documents should be organized in a consistent, systematic manner. A package that is poorly organized or difficult to understand is unfair to the candidate as well as an inefficient use of the investigator's time and agency resources. POST offers sets of tabbed dividers for organizing peace officer and public safety dispatcher background files. These background investigation report organizers can be printed or ordered from the Background/Hiring section under the Forms tab on the POST Website.

Use of these tabbed dividers is not mandatory; however, the tabs help to ensure that the background package is complete and organized so that all information can be readily located by the appointing authority and by POST consultants during the site visit. Chapter 6, “POST Compliance Inspections,” includes detailed guidance on organizing the background investigation package in accordance with POST requirements.

Some agencies employ a system that includes an additional executive summary that omits specific sources of information and sometimes specific details. This summary, coupled with non-confidential material, might be shared with the candidate or others when required by law without compromising confidential and/or privileged information.⁵⁵ Note, however, that information and documents collected in the course of the background investigation supporting the required areas of inquiry and investigation must be retained, as discussed later in this chapter under Record Retention.

The choice of a background organizational reporting system should be made in close consultation with agency command staff and the department’s legal counsel.⁵⁶ As noted earlier, any narrative and packaging system selected/developed must ensure that all areas of inquiry and investigation are thoroughly documented in compliance with POST regulations.

An “investigator’s checklist” is recommended, regardless of the reporting system chosen. The checklist may assist departments in completing the Verification of Qualification for Peace Officer Appointment (POST 2-355.pdf) form which, effective January 1, 2024, must be included in the peace officer background investigation file. The verification form is to be placed in the front of the background file or under Tab A (narrative report), if POST tabs are used. The checklist should also be included in the package,⁵⁷ if/as appropriate, along with all supporting documents situated in the appropriate sections of the completed background file (e.g., employment eligibility documents, marriage dissolution documents, educational records, military records, credit report, fingerprint returns, motor vehicle records, social media printouts, and medical/psychological suitability declarations). Example checklists are provided in Appendix C – C.1 and C.2.

REPORT RECOMMENDATIONS AND REQUIREMENTS

Agency policy will generally dictate whether the investigator is required to offer a recommendation. However, the hiring decision rests with the department head. Background investigators should not include recommendations in their reports unless their recommendations are always followed. This avoids placing the agency in the potentially embarrassing position of having to explain a hiring decision in the face of the investigator’s contrary recommendation.

55 For example, disclosure may be required under the ICRAA or FCRA, as set forth in CC § 1786.10 and 15 USC § 1681g(a) (1) for agencies that employ third-party investigators to conduct background investigations, or, for state agencies, specific provisions of the Information Practices Act of 1978, as set forth in CC §§ 1798.38, 1798.40. However, although the subject of a local criminal history search may have the right to the information obtained from such a search under PC § 13300(b)(12), further disclosure of this information to unauthorized persons is expressly prohibited under PC §§ 13302 and 13303. Finally, agencies may choose to assert the official information privilege as set forth in California Evidence Code § 1040 over the confidential portions of a candidate’s the background investigation file. See Johnson v. Winter, 127 Cal. App. 3d 435 (1982).

56 Privileges, exemptions, and immunities from disclosure may be impacted by the format selected by an agency; a careful review of Evidence Code (EC) § 1040 and PC §§ 13302, 13303, and 13304 is therefore recommended. Agencies may also find a review of CC 1786 et seq. and 1798 et seq. and the FCRA, 15 USC § 1681a et seq. illustrative, although CC § 1798 et seq. does not apply to local agencies and CC § 1786.10 et seq. does not apply to agencies whose records are maintained for law enforcement purposes, and the FCRA will only apply to agencies that use third party investigators to conduct background investigations.

57 Because the checklist contains the identities of references and contacts, it is protected by statute. (See CC § 1798.38 [state agencies]; EC § 1040; and Johnson v. Winter, 127 Cal. App. 3d 425 (1982).).

Rather than making such recommendations, investigators should summarize their findings, especially negative information, around the POST Background Investigation Dimensions and utilize the Bias Assessment Framework (peace officers only) and associated guidance tables.⁵⁸ The narrative report must include background investigation findings, including those relevant to the background dimensions Commission Regulations [1953\(b\) and 1959\(b\)] and bias assessment Commission Regulation [1953\(g\)]. Providing findings ensures that the hiring authority and the screening psychologist have relevant information to make informed hiring decisions. The narrative report should include the results of the investigation in terms of their impact on these critical attributes.

RECORD RETENTION

All parts of the narrative report, including supporting documentation, need to be retained in the background package for inspection by POST in order to verify that all mandated areas of inquiry were thoroughly addressed. In addition, Commission Regulations 1953(g)(3) and 1959(g)(2) stipulate:

“The background narrative report and supporting documentation shall be retained in the individual’s background investigation file for as long as the individual remains in the department’s employ. Additional record retention requirements are described in Government Code § 12946.”

Government Code § 12946⁵⁹ provides that all files containing records of application, including background information, must be retained for a minimum of four years after the files were initially created in the case of applicants who were not hired; records of terminated employees must be maintained for a minimum of four years from the date the employment action was taken. If notified that a verified complaint has been filed against it, an agency must preserve all records and files until the final resolution of the complaint.

In addition to Government Code § 12946, other local and state retention policies may apply, therefore, information gathered as a part of a background (as well as the overall hiring) process should never be destroyed without guidance from and the concurrence of agency command staff and, as appropriate, the agency’s legal advisor. In addition to potential violations of POST regulation, the improper destruction of these records is a criminal offense in California.⁶⁰ Background files can be maintained in hard copy or electronically.

Q: Must an investigator’s handwritten notes be preserved along with the rest of the background?

A: If an investigator’s notes are rough drafts of material faithfully and entirely reproduced in the background file, they do not have to be maintained. However, if the notes are the only record of information obtained, they would be subject to the same retention requirements as any other aspect of the background investigation.

THE CONDITIONAL OFFER OF EMPLOYMENT

Traditionally, the completed background investigation package is forwarded to the hiring authority for evaluation. Those candidates found suitable are then notified by a COE. However, closing out the background investigation prior to a COE limits lawful inquiries into areas such as history of illegal drug use, extent of alcohol use, or other disability-related issues that are prohibited at the pre-offer phase. Therefore, at a minimum, the COE should inform candidates that further background issues may continue to be investigated as warranted. A sample COE is provided in Appendix B.

⁵⁹ Additional records retention requirements for counties are addressed in GC § 26202 et seq.; cities are covered in GC § 34090 et seq.

By law, the entire background investigation may not be deferred to the post-offer phase. However, both ADA and FEHA regulations include provisions for allowing for the deferral of certain nonmedical or non-psychological inquiries until the post-offer stage “if the employer can demonstrate that the information could not have reasonably been collected prior to the COE.” In other words, “an employer must have either completed all non-medical components of its application process or be able to demonstrate that it could not reasonably have done so before issuing the offer....” 2 CCR [§ 11071\(b\)].

A thorough discussion of the practical implications and options for the sequencing of the background investigation with respect to the COE is discussed in Chapter 3, “Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework.” (See “The Conditional Offer of Employment: Pre- and Post-Offer Inquiries.”) That section includes a discussion of Government Code § 1031.2, a statutory provision that specifically addresses the pre/post offer sequencing of peace officer background investigations. As emphasized in Chapter 3, no changes in the sequencing of either the peace officer or the public safety dispatcher background investigation should be implemented without the direct involvement of the agency’s legal counsel.

MEDICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL EVALUATIONS AND BACKGROUND INVESTIGATIONS FOLLOW-UP

Medical evaluations are required for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers; associated regulations are contained in Commission Regulation 1954 (peace officers) and 1960 (dispatchers). Only peace officer candidates are legally required to undergo a psychological evaluation (Commission Regulation 1955). However, many departments choose to adopt additional standards for their public safety dispatchers, including requiring a psychological evaluation.

Even though the background investigation is conducted pre-offer, background investigators may need to follow-up on personal history topics that could not be fully investigated at the pre-offer stage, such as the extent or frequency of past illegal drug use, current/past alcohol abuse, and behavior issues or performance problems associated with medical or psychological conditions. A request for any information or explanations that the applicant may have lawfully withheld at the pre-offer stage can be included with the COE itself.

During the course of the background investigation, the investigator may uncover information indicating that a candidate may be unfit for physical, emotional, or mental reasons. In such cases, the investigator should refrain from asking any medical questions⁶¹ and refer the information to the appropriate professional for evaluation. Furthermore, it is required that the examining physician or psychologist be provided with background information that is relevant to their respective evaluations.⁶² This is especially important if the information bears specific relevance to a particular aspect of the candidate’s medical or psychological condition. There may also be times when the physician or psychologist uncovers information unknown to but relevant for the background investigator. This information should be forwarded to the background investigator for evaluation and additional investigation, if appropriate. In general, the psychologist, physician, and background investigator should work cooperatively as long as the information — especially that from the psychologist or physician to the background investigator — is provided on a strictly “need to know” basis. (See Commission Regulations 1953\(d\)\(2\) and 1959\(d\)\(2\).)

⁶¹ Enforcement Guidance on Disability-Related Inquiries and Medical Examinations of Employees under the ADA

MEDICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL EXAMINATION DOCUMENTATION

Findings of the medical and psychological suitability evaluations must be reported in writing to the appointing authority for use in the hiring decision. For peace officer candidates, the report must include the psychologist's *"findings from the bias assessment...and identify the data sources relied upon for their findings, including information obtained through the background investigation..."*⁶³. As set forth in Commission Regulations 1954, 1955, and 1960, reporting requirements must also include a medical/psychological suitability declaration indicating the candidate's suitability for appointment. For peace officer candidates, suitability must be reported using the Medical Suitability Declaration (POST 2-363) and Psychological Suitability Declaration (POST 2-364) forms. For public safety dispatcher candidates, the suitability declaration must include:

- 1) The evaluator's printed name, contact information and medical license number,
- 2) The candidate's name,
- 3) The date the evaluation was completed, and
- 4) A statement, signed by the physician, affirming that the candidate was evaluated in accordance with Commission Regulations. The statement shall include a determination of the candidate's medical suitability for the position.

The candidate's medical/psychological suitability declaration(s) must be included in the background file; however, the actual report and other documents that include medical and/or psychological information, which may also include a candidate's need for reasonable accommodation, must be kept in a separate confidential medical file (See CC § 56.20).

SECOND OPINIONS

California Regulation grants all candidates who are rejected based on the results of a medical or psychological evaluation the right to submit an independent expert opinion for consideration before a final determination of disqualification is made [2 CCR § 11071\(b\)\(2\)]. Departments should work with their legal counsel to determine an appropriate time period for which a second opinion can be sought to ensure that the selection process continues to move forward.

When a candidate notifies the department that they are seeking an independent opinion, the department is required to make available the job duties, powers, demands, and working conditions and requirements specified in the relevant regulation. (Commission Regulations 1954\(f\)\(2\), 1955\(g\)\(2\), and 1960\(f\).) Other information may be shared with the second-opinion evaluator, such as specific procedures or findings from the initial evaluation, at the discretion of the department as appropriate.

The means for resolving discrepancies in evaluations rests with the department, consistent with local personnel policies and/or rules. Regardless of whether it is created by the departmental psychologist, physician, or a second (or third) opinion evaluator, a medical/psychological suitability declaration, in compliance with POST medical/psychological documentation requirements, must be included in the background file of all candidates who are subsequently hired. In all cases, the candidate must be found suitable prior to appointment.

FINAL EVALUATION – FORMAL OFFER OF EMPLOYMENT

At this time, the hiring authority should have a completed background report, including any required follow-up investigation. All documentation should be secured in the file, the narrative report of the background investigation completed, all medical and psychological screening requirements conducted, and any discrepancies resolved. The appointing authority is now ready to make a final hiring decision.

APPOINTMENT ELIGIBILITY – PEACE OFFICERS

Senate Bill (SB) 2 (2021) requires that peace officers employed by POST-participating agencies have or be eligible for POST certification [PC § 13510.1(a)]. Part of this process includes determining if a candidate is qualified for peace officer employment (GC § 1029.) The Verification of Qualification for Peace Officer Appointment (POST 2-355) and Attestation of Peace Officer Eligibility (POST 2-356) must be completed prior to appointment. In addition to selection and hiring requirements, peace officers must meet specific training mandates prior to appointment. Oftentimes the background investigator is responsible for ensuring that the candidate has met these training requirements. Commission Regulations 1005 and 1007 outline the training requirements for regular, specialized, and reserve peace officers. Commission Regulation 1008 contains the requalification requirements for peace officers who have had an extensive break in service and/or who do not have qualifying service.

For lateral or entry-level (e.g., academy graduate) candidates, requisite training and employment eligibility must be verified prior to appointment. Candidates can access and print their training profile via the online POST PASS system. Departments can request candidate profiles and POST records search requests by submitting a Background Investigation Request.

Once a formal offer of employment has been accepted, a Notice of Appointment (for dispatchers) or Attestation of Peace Officer Eligibility must be submitted via the Electronic Data Interchange (EDI) system to POST within 10 days of appointment. (See PC § 13510.9(a)(1) [peace officer candidates only].)

AREAS OF INVESTIGATION AND THE POST PERSONAL HISTORY STATEMENTS

Commission Regulations 1953 and 1959 specify the required sources of information for background investigations of peace officers and public safety dispatchers, respectively. The required ten sources of investigation are:

- 1) Personal identifying information
- 2) Relatives and other references
- 3) Educational history
- 4) Residential history
- 5) Experience and Employment history
- 6) Military history
- 7) Financial history
- 8) Legal history
- 9) Driving history
- 10) Other topics related to assessing moral character

These information sources generally apply to both peace officers and public safety dispatchers; however, there are statutory and regulatory differences in the manner in which these areas can be investigated. These differences are highlighted in Table 5.1, which compares areas of investigations for these two occupations.

THE POST PERSONAL HISTORY STATEMENT (PHS)

Per Commission Regulations 1953(c) and 1959(c), candidates must complete a PHS before the onset of the background investigation. Although the POST PHS will satisfy this requirement, it is not required.⁶⁴ However, any form used to meet this requirement must include questions in the ten areas of inquiry listed above.

POST offers two PHS to assist in the conduct of background investigations:

- 1) Personal History Statement – Peace Officers (POST 2-251)
- 2) Personal History Statement – Public Safety Dispatchers (POST 2-255)

Table 5.1
AND PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHERS

Type/Source of Information	Peace Officer	Public Safety Dispatcher
1. State Department of Motor Vehicles	Driving record and adherence to the law	Same
2. High school and all higher educational institutions attended	Verify U.S. high school graduation or equivalent, per GC § 1031(e), and character of candidate	Determine school record and character of candidate
3. Official documents (e.g., birth certificate, USCIS Form I-9 documentation)	Verify employment eligibility and age per GC §§ 1031(a),(b) , (h) and 1031.4	Verify eligibility for employment in U.S. per 8 USC § 1324a(b)
4. Police files in jurisdictions where candidate resided, worked or frequently visited	Determine if criminal record exists	Same
5. Criminal records of the California DOJ	Establish legal eligibility for employment and possession of a firearm (via firearms clearance letter)	Establish DOJ eligibility for unsupervised CLETS access, and assessment of integrity and moral character
6. Federal Bureau of Investigation records	Establish legal eligibility for employment and possession of a firearm per GC § 1029 and § 1031 , PC §§ 29800 , 29805 , and 18 USC § 922(d) and (g) . ⁶⁵	Same as criminal records for CA DOJ
7. Other Relevant Records Checks	Verify eligibility for peace officer employment per GC § 1029	Not applicable
8. Previous employers	For at least the past 10 years, to determine quality of work record. For experienced peace officers, a check of their general personnel file or designated separate file is required and inquiry to POST. (See PC §§ 832.12 and 13510.9(d)(3) .)	Within the past 10 years, to determine quality of work record
9. References supplied by candidate, and other references supplied by the initial references (i.e., secondary references)	Determine whether candidate has exhibited behavior incompatible with the position sought	Same
10. Present and past neighborhoods	Determine whether the candidate has exhibited behavior incompatible with the position sought	Same
11. Credit records	Determine credit standing with lenders as an indication of dependability and integrity	Same
12. Military records in and outside of the U.S.	Determine the quality of service and proof of selective service registration where required by law	Same

⁶⁵ In very rare instances, a DOJ firearms clearance will be returned with a letter indicating additional information is needed for the candidate to meet federal firearm laws, see Bulletin 2023-62 for more information on this uncommon issue.

The PHS forms listed in Appendix E can be downloaded from the POST website (<http://post.ca.gov/forms>). They may be completed by hand or electronically (except for initials and signatures), based on the requirements of the hiring department.

Although the two PHS forms contain many of the same questions, there are several key differences as a result of both statutes and the different demands and requirements associated with these two professions. These differences are listed in Table 5.2 at the end of this chapter.

It is strongly recommended that, prior to using the POST PHS or any personal history statement that departments submit the form(s) to their legal counsel to ensure that the form(s) meet the requirements of all local, state, and federal laws, rules, and regulations. Agencies who wish to revise the POST PHS forms can request unprotected, editable versions by emailing POST.

The PHS is divided into ten sections that parallel the required areas of investigation. Each section/area of investigation is discussed below, referenced by the corresponding section in the POST PHS.

PHS Section 1: Personal

This section requests information on:

- Name (current, past, and nicknames)
- Address (residential and mailing)
- Contact Information (phone numbers and e-mail address)
- Eligibility for Employment
- Birthplace and Birth Date
- Social Security Number
- Driver's License
- Physical Description

This information is to be used to verify the candidate's identity, obtain contact information, determine that the candidate meets statutory requirements, and to enable fingerprinting and the accurate acquisition of documents required to successfully conduct the background investigation.

VERIFYING IDENTITY

Establishing identity is a first critical step in the background investigation process. An original birth certificate or certified copy should at least be examined, a copy of which can be made for the investigator's records. If a birth certificate cannot be located (or is in a foreign language), a U.S. passport, passport card, or an original or certified copy of a Certification of Naturalization, valid Permanent Resident Card, Employment Authorization Document, or other official documentation will suffice. Candidates can be assigned the responsibility for obtaining these documents, as well as all other personal documents.

It is permissible to make copies of official documents; only duplicates made with the intent to defraud are prohibited by law.

Both the parents' and the candidate's name should be verified in these documents. Any discrepancies should be explained.

DISCREPANCIES IN NAMES – USE OF AN ALIAS

Name changes can occur for a variety of legitimate reasons, including marriage, adoption, or naturalization. The law permits individuals to use any name as long as the change of name is not for fraudulent purposes. However, the candidate should be able to produce documents that reflect these changes. Use of other names for fraudulent or other illegal purposes speaks directly to the individual's suitability for law enforcement.

EMPLOYMENT ELIGIBILITY

Every employer in the U.S. is required by law to show that anyone hired since June 1, 1986, is legally eligible to be employed in the U.S.⁶⁶ This is true for native-born citizens, as well as naturalized citizens and permanent residents. Both peace officers and public safety dispatchers must be legally authorized to work in the U.S.

Proof of eligibility to work in the U.S. can be confirmed through the completion of an Employment Eligibility Verification (USCIS Form I-9), signed by the employer, or any documents listed as acceptable per the Form I-9.⁶⁷

Birthplace and birth date are collected for identification purposes, fingerprinting, and to verify that peace officer candidates meet the minimum age requirement of 21 years old.⁶⁸ Note that both federal and state laws prohibit employment discrimination based on age and national origin.

Age can be verified by presentation of a valid birth certificate, or other documents as described above, including those listed on the USCIS Form I-9 for verifying employment eligibility requirements, if the documents include the date of birth information.

SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER

A social security number is collected to obtain credit records, employment files, and other information. Care must be taken to ensure that this information is not shared with unauthorized individuals and is otherwise kept private.

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION AND PHOTOGRAPHS

Photographs, as well as a physical description of the candidate (e.g., height, weight, hair color, eye color), can be very useful for positive identification purposes during the background investigation. The photograph should be taken when the candidate meets with the background investigator to start the background process. There are some candidate protection rules regarding the use of photographs:

- Photographs are not permitted at the time of initial application and may not be used as a basis for employment discrimination
- Candidates cannot be made to pay for their own photographs

PHS Section 2: Relatives and References

This section requests contact information on:

⁶⁶ See 8 USC § 1324a\(b\).

⁶⁷ U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) Form I-9: Employment Eligibility Verification (<https://www.uscis.gov/i-9>); Form I-9 Acceptable Documents (<https://www.uscis.gov/i-9-central/form-i-9-acceptable-documents>).

⁶⁸ GC § 1031.4. Exemptions to the 21 years of age minimum requirement include jail deputies appointed under 830.1(c) of the Penal Code.

- Parents (including stepparents and in-laws)
 - Spouses/Registered domestic partners (current and former)
 - Siblings (including half, step, foster, etc.)
 - Children (including natural, adopted, step, and foster)
 - Personal references, excluding family members or individuals listed elsewhere

Commission Regulations 1953 and 1959 require that background investigators contact the references supplied by the candidate, and other references supplied by these initial contacts (i.e., secondary references), to determine whether the candidate has exhibited behavior incompatible with the position sought. Anyone who knows the candidate is a potential source of information. Typically, different types of personal associations with the candidate will lead to familiarity with different facets of the candidate's background. These individuals' greatest value may be as sources of information for secondary references; that is, other individuals who know the candidate but were not listed as such by the candidate. Sometimes secondary references prove to be more candid than primary references supplied by the candidate.

The number of contacts that are initiated is largely up to the common sense and good judgment of the investigators and their reviewing authorities. In general, more contacts are better than few, but investigators and their agencies are ultimately responsible for determining to what length an investigation must go. Every contact attempted should be documented.

Not every person or entity contacted will respond to a request for an interview, return a phone call, respond to an email, or complete and mail back a questionnaire. The duty to cooperate with background investigations is a matter of public policy; however, except in very narrow circumstances, there is no legal obligation to do so. Background investigators should document even unsuccessful attempts to contact references.

FAMILY MEMBERS

Family members often have the most long-term and in-depth knowledge of the candidate. Relatives may be able to provide information about the candidate's traits and temperament, academic problems and learning ability, legal misconduct (e.g., arrests and/or lawsuits), as well as names of others who are familiar with the candidate. That longstanding relationship with the candidate may, however, affect the objectivity of the information provided. Investigators must judge the completeness and accuracy of that information on a case-by-case basis.

It is recommended that the investigator inquire into whether the candidate has had serious interpersonal problems, including whether the candidate has had any marital problems or any problems with physical or psychological abuse.

This does not mean, however, that the investigator should examine every minor family disagreement and dispute, nor unnecessarily violate a family's privacy. The purpose, rather, is to inquire into problems that are of sufficient severity to affect job performance and therefore the candidate's qualifications. Note, however, that investigators must never ask questions about family medical history, regardless of whether the interview takes place pre- or post-offer.⁶⁹

The investigator should be aware that attitudes of the spouse or other close personal relations regarding the candidate joining the department might affect that person's ability to objectively evaluate the candidate's qualifications. The investigator may find it useful to ascertain those attitudes.

⁶⁹ Genetic Information Nondiscrimination Act of 2008 \(GINA\)

Officers and dispatchers have been known to be susceptible to the influence of unprincipled relatives or acquaintances; therefore, such information uncovered during the investigation should be examined. However, having relatives or acquaintances with a criminal or unsavory past or who exhibit biased behaviors and/or attitudes should not be an automatic basis for disqualification. Instead, the investigator should focus on the candidate's behavior regarding such relatives or acquaintances and the degree of the candidate's susceptibility to such influence.

MARITAL STATUS

An individual's marital status is prohibited as a basis for employment discrimination.⁷⁰ No judgments should be made about the candidate's current marital status (i.e., married, single, separated, or divorced), nor should routine inquiry be made into the facts surrounding the candidate's decision to marry or remain single.

FORMER SPOUSE(S)/FORMER REGISTERED DOMESTIC PARTNER(S)

Peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates who were previously married or in a domestic partnership must show proof of dissolution of marriage or the domestic partnership even if they have not subsequently remarried or entered into a new domestic partnership. Besides helping to establish legal rights of survivorship or medical decision-making, dissolution documents can contain highly relevant information concerning a candidate's character or financial well-being. Restraining orders, allegations of domestic violence, property settlements, and continuing financial obligations may be detailed in such documents.

Although a copy of the final judgment is sufficient, an inspection of the full file has the benefit of indicating any current or past restraining orders. The final judgment should be inspected to ensure that a final date of dissolution (not merely a request for final judgment) is entered. For candidates who were divorced outside of the U.S. while they were a citizen of another country, proof of dissolution is often easier to establish by reviewing their Certificate of Naturalization, rather than attempting to translate and verify the legal sufficiency of a foreign document.

Former spouses or domestic partners can be the source of very useful information for a wide variety of uses, including employment history, residences, financial problems, drug use, and other facts. The reason for the breakup itself can provide useful information. The given reasons should be confirmed, whenever possible, by obtaining a copy of the dissolution of marriage or domestic partnership or checking the civil filing index of the court in order to uncover further information. The investigator should also confirm that child support, if any, is up-to-date.

Any information gathered from a prior spouse/partner should be carefully evaluated and corroborated. Ill feelings generated by dissolution can cause hostility towards the candidate, which can affect the honesty of the information provided. However, if serious acts of wrongdoing are alleged, every effort should be made to verify those claims through additional sources. For example, if acts of domestic violence are claimed, the investigation should include determining whether police reports were filed and/or court restraining orders were sought.

CHILDREN

Generally, the behavior of the candidate's offspring should not be used in evaluating the candidate's acceptability. Exceptions would be the situations in which the candidate knowingly supported or contributed to the delinquent behavior of the offspring, or there is evidence of abuse or neglect. Support of dependents is a separate question, which is addressed later in this chapter in the Financial section.

⁷⁰ GC § 12940(a).

OTHER REFERENCES

Anyone who has lived with or has had a relationship with the candidate is a potential source of relevant information, depending upon the nature of their relationship and how recently that relationship existed. Therefore, the context, frequency of contact, and length of the candidate's relationship with the relative, reference, or acquaintance should be investigated. However, no judgments should be made based on the mere fact of the gender of the individual with whom the candidate has resided.

Some references, even those supplied by the candidate, will be quite reluctant to provide disparaging information about the individual. It is critical that a valid authorization form from the candidate be provided along with an explanation of the protection afforded to the information they provide. A sample authorization form for peace officer candidates is included in Appendix B – Sample B.5.

The background investigator is required to solicit and then contact secondary references as provided by relatives, references, and acquaintances Commission Regulation [1953\(e\)\(7\)]. The secondary and other references can often provide the investigator with valuable insight and information that listed references may not be willing to furnish.

References should be asked about the candidate's participation in illegal or unethical conduct, their knowledge of the candidate's reputation for honesty and integrity, and their knowledge of the candidate's behaviors, traits and/or attributes relevant to bias, including verbal and/or written statements espousing bias and/or hate speech, toward a protected group or individuals perceived to belong to the group. Specific instances of illegal or unethical activity and/or indications of bias, including hate speech and/or hate group affiliation,⁷¹ should be corroborated and documented. Other useful topic areas include candidate drug use, financial difficulties, strengths and weaknesses, intergroup contact, and their understanding of the reasons underlying their interest in a career in law enforcement.

Ideally, relatives and references should be interviewed in person or, minimally, via real-time contact (e.g., via phone call). However, if the individuals to be contacted are not within a geographical area that makes personal interviews feasible, or if availability is an issue, contacts may be made through email or mailed inquiries. A sample letter and questionnaire are located in Appendix C – Samples C.3 and C.4. Questionnaires should always include space for the individual completing the form to include additional contact information for follow-up and a place to list secondary references.

PHS Section 3: Education

This section requests information on secondary and post-secondary education, including:

- Degrees and certificates
- Dates attended and units completed
- Trade, vocational, or business schools/institutes attended
- Attendance at a POST Basic Academy/Public Safety Dispatcher Basic Course
- History of academic discipline, suspension, or expulsion

Peace officer candidates must have achieved a high school diploma or equivalent.⁷² No minimum educational standards are established for public safety dispatchers; however, educational information listed on their PHS must be verified.

VERIFYING MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS – PEACE OFFICERS

Government Code § 1031\(e\) established the following education standards for peace officers; however, this does not preclude an agency from establishing higher, job-related post-secondary education requirements. All peace officers must have attained one of the following:

- Graduated from an acceptable U.S. public high school, DOD high school, or accredited or approved public or non-public high school, or
- Passed the GED test or other high school equivalency test approved by the State Department of Education, or
- Passed the California High School Proficiency Examination, or
- Attained a two-year, four-year, or advanced degree from an accredited college or university.

U.S. public high schools are acceptable if they meet the high school standards set by the state in which the school is located. The status of a public high school, as well as many private schools, can be checked by contacting that state's Department of Education, or the local school district itself. A list of state education departments can be accessed at <https://www.ed.gov/about/contact-us>.

To comply with Government Code § 1031(e), nonpublic high schools as well as post-secondary institutions must be accredited or approved by:

- A state or local government educational agency,
- A regional accrediting association,
- An accrediting association recognized by the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Education or holding full membership in the National Council for Private School Accreditation (NCPISA) or the National Federation of Nonpublic School State Accrediting Associations (NFNSSAA), or
- An organization holding full membership in AdvancED or Cognia or the Council for American Private Education (CAPE).

Accreditation of postsecondary institutions (e.g., colleges, universities) can be searched through the U.S. Department of Education's Database of Accredited Postsecondary Institutions and Programs (DAPIP). Accredited U.S. DOD high schools are also sanctioned by Government Code § 1031(e). The status of a DOD school can be checked at www.dodea.edu.

There are a limited number of foreign schools that meet the criteria stipulated in Government Code § 1031(e). These include overseas schools operated by the DOD schools, foreign schools accredited by an association recognized by one of the accrediting agencies recognized by the Secretary of the United States Department of Education, or an association or organization holding membership in one of the accrediting bodies listed in the Government Code.

Official transcripts are the only authoritative means of verifying a person's educational background. Transcripts may be acquired through the institution itself or through an e-transcript service authorized by the educational institution. Transcripts from accredited institutions should bear regional accrediting information. Some candidates may be reluctant to furnish original transcripts because of the fees involved or the steps necessary to arrange for them.

Not uncommonly, however, the reason that candidates fail to furnish original transcripts is because their academic records have been impounded for unpaid school fees or loans, a fact that may serve as another legitimate area of concern.

If official records are not available through any source, and the candidate does not have any of the other qualifications outlined in Government Code § 1031(e), they will need to pass the GED or other high school equivalency test approved by the state Department of Education.

NOTE: Transcripts, degrees, or credentials that have been translated or evaluated for equivalency by an evaluation service do NOT meet the requirements of Government Code § 1031(e) or Commission Regulation 1953. The educational institution itself must be accredited or approved by one of the recognized accrediting bodies.

RELATED EDUCATIONAL BACKGROUND INQUIRIES

Commission Regulations 1953(e)(5) and 1959(e)(4) require that an investigation must be made into the high school and all higher educational institutions that the candidate attended. At a minimum, this investigation should verify that the information supplied by the candidate on the PHS is accurate. School personnel may also provide useful information if the candidate has recently finished school. This is especially true if there is any record of disciplinary actions, such as suspensions, expulsions, or any other form of academic punishment.

It can be particularly useful to contact staff from the candidate's Basic Police Academy or Public Safety Dispatcher Academy. Academy staff are especially likely to remember candidates who stood out from their classmates. Candidates who claim completion of POST-Certified basic training on their PHS should provide a copy of their POST Profile, which can be easily accessed by the candidate through the online POST PASS system.

PHS Section 4: Residence

This section requires candidates to detail their residential history for the past ten years (or since the age of 15), including:

- Addresses
- Dates resided
- Contact information for property manager, rent collector, or owner
- Roommate/housemate contact information
- Reasons for moving
- History of being evicted or asked to leave a residence
- History of leaving a residence owing rent

Commission Regulations 1953(e)(9) and 1959(e)(8) stipulate that the background investigation include “contacts and interviews with current, and where practicable, previous neighbors to determine whether the candidate has exhibited behavior incompatible with the position sought.” An investigation of residential history facilitates local police record inquiries, as well as providing information about the candidate from neighbors, landlords, roommates, and others acquainted with the candidate.

A neighborhood check is not merely a restatement of a candidate's residential history. Rather, it includes contacting a sampling of neighbors (and landlords) to determine if any job-relevant behaviors can be identified and documenting those contacts. Although there is no specific number of required contacts, it does not preclude the investigator from meeting this obligation and, at a minimum, attempting to contact neighbors in person, regardless of the length the candidate has been at the residence. If in-person contact is not feasible, investigators must contact neighbors via phone, mail, and/or electronically. A sample neighborhood reference check interview questionnaire can be found in Appendix C – Sample C.5. Questionnaires should include space for the neighbor to include contact information (e.g., phone, email) for further follow-up, if/as necessary.

The security provisions in some housing complexes may restrict the ability to directly contact neighbors and information gleaned from the property owner may be all that is available. For limited access locations, investigators should search public information for contact information. Every effort should be made to contact the neighbors to inquire about the candidate. All attempts should be documented.

When interviewing neighbors, the background investigator should inquire into how well the neighbor is acquainted with the candidate, whether there have been any incidents requiring a law enforcement response at the candidate's residence, and how the candidate interacts with others in the neighborhood. Contacts with landlords and property managers/homeowners' associations should include inquiries into the candidate's timeliness in paying rent, complaints from other neighbors or tenants about the candidate, and whether the property was vacated with the proper notice and left in good repair. Information gleaned from these interviews must be included in the background narrative report.

If personal interviews with landlords are not feasible, inquiries may be made by letter. Appendix C – Samples C.6 and C.7 include a sample letter and background questionnaire for landlords.

PHS Section 5: Experience and Employment

Information about the candidate's past work behavior and performance is of tremendous value when determining the individual's suitability for employment. Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(6\) requires an investigation of a peace officer candidate's employment history for a minimum of the past ten years; however, the peace officer PHS requires candidates to document their entire employment history (and, in the case of dispatcher candidates, their employment for the past ten years). Information inquiries include:

- Employer name, location, and dates and status of employment
- Job titles and duties
- Name and contact information for supervisors and coworkers
- Reasons for leaving (or wanting to leave)
- Dates and reasons for periods of unemployment
- History of counterproductive work behavior, including:
 - Disciplinary actions
 - Being fired, released from probation, or asked to resign
 - Workplace violence
 - Resignation in lieu of termination
 - Subject of written complaints or counseling for poor performance
 - Subject of discrimination accusations
 - Attendance problems

- Unsatisfactory performance reviews
 - Misuse of confidential information
 - Misuse of sick leave
 - Poor performance as a result of drug/alcohol consumption
- History and status of applications to other law enforcement agencies

GENERAL AREAS OF EMPLOYMENT HISTORY INQUIRY

At a minimum, investigators should:

- Contact past employers and co-workers
- Inquire into the reason(s) for the candidate's having had no prior employment or extended gaps in employment
- Inquire into whether the candidate has ever been fired or asked to resign from any place of employment and the circumstances surrounding the termination or resignation
- Inquire into a candidate's reason for leaving a job if that reason is other than being fired or being asked to leave
- Inquire into the facts that formed the basis for rejection of the candidate from another position requiring peace officer powers
- Inquire into whether the candidate has ever received unemployment insurance, workers compensation, or other state or federal assistance through fraudulent means

POST regulations require the investigation of a peace officer candidate's past ten years of employment. However, there may be circumstances where an agency feels the need to investigate beyond that ten-year period because of answers furnished on the PHS, such as an indication of significant disciplinary problems, terminations, prior peace officer experience, etc.

EMPLOYERS

Quite often, both public and private employers refuse to speak to investigators or refer to their designated spokespersons who provide very limited information. Government Code § 1031.1 was specifically added to facilitate obtaining written employment information from present or past employers of peace officer candidates who are not currently employed as peace officers or applicants for positions other than sworn peace officer within a law enforcement agency (i.e., public safety dispatchers).⁷³ It requires these employers to disclose employment information to background investigators, including job applications, performance evaluations, attendance records, disciplinary actions, eligibility for rehire, and other information relevant to the performance of a peace officer or other law enforcement agency applicant, except information prohibited from disclosure by any other state or federal law or regulation. However:

- The request must be made in writing
- The request must be accompanied by a notarized authorization from the candidate releasing the employer of liability

⁷³ Per Cal. Gov't Code § 1031.1\(d\), an employer's refusal to disclose information to a law enforcement agency constitutes grounds for a civil action for injunctive relief. Note that this provision may not apply to dispatchers employed by non-law enforcement agencies.

- The request and authorization must be presented to the employer by a sworn officer or other authorized representative of the employing law enforcement agency
- The disclosed information is deemed confidential. However, the information may be released to other law enforcement agencies that are also conducting a background investigation into a peace officer or other law enforcement agency applicant. In this case, the receiving agency shall use the information for investigative leads only and must independently verify the information to use it in determining suitability for peace officer or other law enforcement agency applicant employment.

Past and present employers are entitled to charge reasonable fees to reimburse costs incurred in furnishing the information.

A sample of a written request for information, including a copy of Government Code § 1031.1, is included in Appendix C – Samples C.8 and C.9. Note that individual employers may have their own specific requirements and release forms to be completed before they provide information.

Access to employment information on past or current employees of a public agency but who are not covered by Government Code § 1031.1 is guaranteed by the California Public Records Act.⁷⁴ Penal Code § 832.7\(b\) makes certain peace officer records subject to disclosure under a Public Records Act request.

CANDIDATES WITH PRIOR PEACE OFFICER EMPLOYMENT

Penal Code § 832.12 requires peace officer employers to make a record of any investigations of misconduct by a peace officer in the officer's general personnel file or a separate file designated by the department. It further obligates a peace officer seeking employment with another department to give written permission to view the file and obligates the hiring department to review the records.⁷⁵

Penal Code § 13510.1(g) requires POST-participating agencies to employ peace officers with valid POST certificates, which requires verifying that candidates are eligible for employment, including whether or not their certification has been suspended, denied, or voluntarily surrendered as these are now grounds for disqualification from employment as a peace officer pursuant to Government Code § 1029(a)(10). Investigators must request a copy of the candidate's POST profile to determine the candidate's certification status. Similarly, investigators must search the National Decertification Index, or any other database designated by the federal government, to determine if a peace officer's license has been revoked for misconduct, as this is also a basis for disqualification from employment as a peace officer pursuant to Government Code § 1029(a)(11).

Penal Code § 13510.9\(d\)\(3\) requires that departments contact POST to inquire into the facts and reasons that a peace officer separated from a previous department. Investigators should submit a Background Investigation Request to POST seeking information on their separation from employment.

Penal Code § 13670\(c\) requires a law enforcement agency to "disclose the termination of a peace officer for participation in a law enforcement gang to another law enforcement agency conducting a preemployment background investigation of that former peace officer," unless specifically prohibited by law.

Dispatcher applicants should not be asked to complete waivers designed for peace officer applicants; rather, separate waivers should be designed for that purpose. Investigators can reassure references contacted in the course of such backgrounds that similar privileges per Civil Code § 47 may apply, but only if the agency is in the POST Public Safety Dispatcher Program, thereby making a background investigation a legal requirement. Investigators should consult with their agency's legal counsel before making such assurances.

⁷⁴ Cal. Gov't Code § 7920.000 et seq.

Some past employers maintain records only for limited periods of time, others cease operations, and still others even decline to respond to those requests even though they are legally required to do so (i.e., GC § 1031.1). To satisfy POST, every contact with a current or past employer, even an unsuccessful one, needs to be documented. The extent to which the department is willing to pursue remedies under the law to attempt to obtain this information is governed by the department and its legal counsel, not by POST. It is also up to the agency to decide the impact of an inability to obtain meaningful (or any) information from a present or former employer.

Civil Code § 47\(c\) confers absolute privilege⁷⁶ on the persons who are contacted or who come forward on legally mandated backgrounds (i.e., peace officers and public safety dispatchers in the POST program). As discussed in Chapter 3, "Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework," information that is privileged may not be introduced in a court proceeding if it is adverse to the interests of the provider of that information. This protection should be spelled out in a notarized letter from the candidate releasing the employer from liability, such as in the sample letter for peace officer candidates found in Appendix B – Sample B.6, and the comparable letter for dispatcher candidates located in Appendix B – Sample B.7. Employers can also be reminded of the legal risks associated with providing inaccurate evaluations, either highly positive or negative.

Information from the employer should include, if at all possible:

- A verification of the dates of employment and the position(s) held
- An examination of the original application documents to assure that the candidate is disclosing their entire job history
- An assessment of the candidate's job skills and reputation as an employee
- Identification of any performance problems or work habits, including the ability to work with others and as part of a team
- The candidate's attendance and punctuality record or other indications of dependability
- The real reason why the employee is leaving or has left that employer
- If the former employer would recommend or rehire that person

Before drawing any conclusions, the background investigator should establish or refute the veracity of any negative information; to the extent possible, the employer's observations should be supported with official records. Any discrepancies between these personal assessments and the official record should be explored. Investigators must keep in mind that many employers, even public employers, often fail to document assessments of work performance, and an official record may be very difficult, if not impossible, to access.

SUPERVISORS AND CO-WORKERS

Current and past co-workers and supervisors can serve as useful sources of information, as well as a source of leads to additional co-workers, friends, and other useful contacts. As with all references, the relevance and usefulness of the information provided by these individuals depends upon how recently they worked with the candidate, for how long, and the nature of their work relationship. Any information provided by supervisors and co-workers, positive or negative, should be carefully evaluated and corroborated.

If past employers and supervisors cannot be interviewed personally, contact may be made by letter or by telephone. A sample letter and questionnaire that can be used to contact the past and present employers are found in Appendix C – Samples C.10 and C.11.

PERIODS OF UNEMPLOYMENT

The PHS requires candidates to indicate all periods of unemployment and the reason for the unemployment, choosing from five categories: student, between jobs, leave of absence, travel, and other. As discussed in the section on disability discrimination, medical inquiries are prohibited prior to a COE. However, it is permissible to question any gaps or sudden departures of employment per se, even if it may elicit information about a medical condition or disability. Medical information volunteered in response to this line of questioning should not be pursued until and unless the candidate receives a conditional job offer.

REASON FOR LEAVING A JOB

While inquiring into the reasons for the candidate's leaving a job is recommended, caution must be exercised. Limited employment opportunity is a valid and acceptable reason for terminating an employment relationship, as are hostile work environments, unlawful terms of employment, relocation, and other explanations.

CURRENT EMPLOYER

A current employer or supervisor may present a biased or inaccurate picture of the candidate in order to encourage (or discourage) employment of the candidate elsewhere. The investigator must exercise caution and ensure that any information, either positive or negative, is carefully evaluated and corroborated.

The investigator should avoid deliberately placing a candidate's present job in jeopardy. If on the PHS, the candidate indicated that there would be a problem if the current employer were contacted, it is lawful to defer contact with that employer until after a COE has been extended. In this case, the investigator should contact the present employer only after all other candidate screening steps have taken place.⁷⁷

REJECTION FROM ANOTHER PEACE OFFICER OR PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHER POSITION

The investigator should inquire into the facts surrounding the rejection for any other peace officer or public safety dispatcher position. Resulting information must be carefully verified and evaluated; it should not automatically be assumed that the previous investigation was unbiased, thorough, and complete. Furthermore, different agencies may have different minimum standards (such as age, education, drug use history, residency, etc.); therefore, the investigator should assess whether the reasons for such rejection are relevant to the present employer. Another employer's reason for rejection is not automatically relevant. Agencies should reject unsuitable candidates based on their own job-relevant criteria rather than those of another agency (especially if those reasons have not been independently verified or are deemed irrelevant, outdated, or otherwise inapplicable).

Note: Per Penal Code § 11105\(k\), \(l\), DOJ is required to provide the date and name of every agency that has previously requested a search of the candidate's criminal history. This information may help corroborate the experience and employment included in the candidate's PHS.

PHS Section 6: Military

Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(10\) requires that the background investigation of peace officer candidates include an evaluation of military records in the service of the U.S., jurisdictions therein, or foreign government, to determine the quality of the individual's service and proof of Selective Service registration where required by law. The same investigation is required of public safety dispatcher candidates, per Regulation 1959\(e\)\(9\).

This section of the PHS requires candidates to detail their military history, including:

- Selective Service registration (if applicable)
- Branch of service and dates
- Type of discharge
- Current status as a reservist
- Disciplinary actions, judicial and non-judicial
- Security clearance problems

The candidate's participation in the National Guard or a reserve component of the armed services is protected by the Military and Veterans Code § 394. It is a misdemeanor to discriminate against a reservist in any aspect of employment. Further, Government Code § 12940 prohibits discrimination based on military or veteran status.

SELECTIVE SERVICE REGISTRATION

In July 1980, Congress restored the Selective Service registration, requiring all males (excluding the sons of foreign diplomats) born on or after January 1, 1960, to register within 30 days of their 18th birthday, and up to the age of 26, they are required to notify the Selective Service of changes in name, address, or telephone number.

Information on the candidate's compliance with current registration requirements can be obtained from the Selective Service System. If proof of registration is not available on the website, a letter should be written to the Selective Service System. A sample written inquiry is provided in Appendix C – Sample C.12.

Note that since 1973, the military has used the individual's social security number for identification purposes.

Although, willful failure to register per the Military Selective Service Act (50 U.S.C. § 3801 et seq.) may not be a disqualifier under POST regulations, any explanation to justify a failure to register must be made by the applicant to the agency administering the right, benefit, or privilege for which Selective Service System registration is required and should be noted in the background file.

MILITARY SERVICE HISTORY

Military service records should be requested on candidates who have served in the military. Candidates can obtain their military service records electronically through eVetRecs. Military records can also be obtained by using either a Standard Form 180⁷⁸ or an equivalent form developed by the agency. Information on how to obtain military service records can be found by matching the candidate's service history with the records repositories listed on the back of the SF-180. To ensure that complete information is received, a letter, signed by the candidate, can be submitted that specifies the exact information requested, including:

- copies of personnel records,
- copies of DD-214s,
- eligibility for reenlistment,
- records of judicial and non-judicial punishments,
- performance ratings, and other records.

DD-214

Candidates who have been in the military are almost always issued a report of separation each time they are released/discharged from active duty. Individuals may have one or more such reports, depending on their military history. There are two versions of the DD-214⁷⁹: a short form and a long form. Commission Regulations 1953(e)(10) and 1959(e)(9) require investigators to examine the long form (usually depicted as a Form 2 or 4), which contains the separation information (type of separation, character of service, authority, and reason for separation, separation, and reenlistment eligibility codes). Investigators should always examine an original document.

With the exception of some “entry-level separations,” virtually anyone who enters the military will be issued discharge documents at their time of separation. If the candidate possesses a DD-214 “short form,” it is almost inconceivable that they were not issued a “long form,” as well (they are generally stapled together).

Currently, inquiries directed to the Army and Air Force generally produce less comprehensive replies. However, most recent veterans can obtain copies of their separation documents online. (Note: Many military records issued prior to 1973 were destroyed in a catastrophic fire at the National Personnel Records Center, although the number of applicants facing that issue is rapidly declining.)

RE-ENTRY CODES

Although re-entry codes reflect a variety of things, a “1” or “2” generally indicates that there were no problems. A “3” indicates some substantial issue that needs to be explored because re-enlistment would require a waiver by the service branch. A “4” indicates that re-enlistment would be prohibited and must be carefully explored. However, re-entry codes may vary depending upon the branch of service, thus they should be verified through the respective branch of service.

TYPE OF DISCHARGE/CHARACTER OF SERVICE

The DD-214 will list one of five possible entries under “character of service” (type of discharge):

- 1) Honorable
- 2) General – under honorable conditions (less than full honorable)
- 3) Other than honorable conditions (OTH or UD)

⁷⁹ Military reservists and National Guard members without active military service will not necessarily receive a DD-214; rather they will be issued separation documents, such as a DD-249, DD-256, or NGB-22.

- 4) Bad conduct discharge (BCD) – resulting from a special court martial
 - 5) Dishonorable discharge – resulting from a general court martial. No longer considered a veteran.

Because the reason for separation, type of discharge, and re-enlistment codes appear only in predetermined combinations on genuine DD-214s, a local armed forces recruiter can help if assistance is needed in interpreting the meaning of these or other codes. However, federal privacy laws prohibit identifying the service member when discussing the form.

CURRENT MILITARY STATUS

The PHS asks the candidate to indicate any current military obligations (e.g., military reserve or National Guard program). When the candidate indicates a current military obligation, the current unit, co-workers, and supervisors should be treated no differently than a civilian job.

MILITARY DISCIPLINE

Inquiry into judicial and non-judicial military disciplinary action may reflect upon the candidate's suitability. Such information should be explained in the PHS and verified through military records (i.e., DD-214 or other available records), or through contact with military acquaintances or commanding officers.

Senate Bill (SB) 2 (2021) added two subsections to 1029 of the Government Code disqualifying individuals from peace officer employment, if they have been discharged from the military for committing an offense, as adjudicated by a military tribunal, which would have been a felony if committed in California, or if, following the exhaustion of all appeals, they are convicted of either a misdemeanor or a felony, or adjudicated through administrative, military, or civil judicial process requiring not less than clear and convincing evidence, including if the acts were committed in other jurisdictions which would have been in violation of specific sections if committed in California. (See GC § 1029(a)(3) and (9).)

CONTACT PAST COMMANDING OFFICERS OR MILITARY ACQUAINTANCES

When interviewing commanding officers and military acquaintances, the investigator might ask questions such as:

- When or how long ago did you know the candidate?
- How well did you know the candidate?
- Was the candidate ever the subject of any disciplinary action?
- Do you know if the candidate got along well with others?
- Can you think of any reason why the candidate might not be qualified to work in a law enforcement agency?

PHS Section 7: Financial

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(11\) and 1959\(e\)\(10\) require that a credit check be performed on peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates, "to determine the candidate's credit standing with lenders, as an indication of the candidate's dependability and integrity." This section requires the candidate to provide an estimate of their income and expenditures, and to respond to specific questions associated with the history of fiscal responsibility, including:

- Bankruptcy filings
- Contact by collection agencies
- Repossessions
- Wage garnishments
- Delinquencies, failure to pay, or cheating on taxes
- Employment bond refusals
- Defaulting or avoiding repayment on loans
- Debts due to gambling
- Expenditures on illegal activities
- Failure to make court-ordered payments
- Bad checks

Although an important area of investigation, the evaluation of a candidate's behavior regarding the handling of finances must be careful and judicious. In some instances, outwardly negative information may involve legal rights and even factors that are completely outside of the candidate's control. Financial opportunities can be limited as much by race, gender, marital status, and even geography as by the willful acts of the candidate. It is therefore critically important to understand the full circumstances surrounding any apparently negative financial information.

SOURCE OF INCOME

Investigators are permitted to inquire into sources of income reported by the candidate. However, candidates cannot be asked to reveal their salary history information.⁸⁰ The POST PHS forms require the candidate to provide their total monthly disposable income, which may include income from spousal support, business ventures, and investments. Provided that the source of income is lawful, investigators should not draw conclusions about a candidate merely based on the amount of money earned.

EXPENDITURES

It is permissible to inquire into the amount of money a candidate claims to spend on a monthly basis. However, assuming that the expenditures are for a lawful purpose, how a candidate chooses to spend money is generally not relevant. Instead, the focus should address the following questions: Does the reported income support the expenditures that a candidate claims? Do the reported expenditures correspond with the obligations appearing in the credit report? Does the candidate meet the obligations that they have agreed to assume?

BANKRUPTCY

Individuals have three essential avenues in which bankruptcy may be pursued: Chapter 7 (discharge of debt), Chapter 11 (business-related protection from creditors), and Chapter 13 (individual reorganization of debt). Bankruptcy is a legal right. Absent any evidence of fraud, the mere fact that a candidate has undergone bankruptcy cannot be the sole basis upon which employment is denied.⁸¹ Investigators may inquire into the circumstances that led up to the bankruptcy, including the examination of supporting court records regarding reported assets and liabilities at the time when the bankruptcy petition was filed. Once filed with the U.S. District Court, these are public records. Records may be accessed through the Public Access to Court Electronic Records (PACER) system.

⁸¹ 11 USC § 525

Federal and state law forbids a consumer/credit reporting agency from reporting any fully discharged bankruptcy that is more than ten years old. 15 USC § 1681c(a)(1); Cal. Civ Code [§ 1786.18\(a\)\(1\)].

BILLS TURNED OVER FOR COLLECTION AND REPOSSESSIONS

In many cases, collection activity and repossessions are indicative of problem behavior. Investigators should take care to ensure that the bill in collection is, in fact, the responsibility of the candidate against whose credit it has been reported and that any repossession reported similarly applies to the candidate. Investigators should then inquire as to why the bill had to be turned over to collection or why repossession was necessary.

GARNISHMENTS

At one time, garnishments were almost always indicative of a candidate's failure to meet obligations. Today, however, as in the case of child support obligations, many courts automatically garnish wages, even where there has been no history of delinquencies. In some cases, tax payment plans can, for the convenience of the taxpayer, be automatically garnished from wages and frequently involve liens against the taxpayer's credit record.

TAX DELINQUENCIES

The failure to satisfy lawful tax obligations may have a significant financial impact on a candidate's suitability. However, the reasons for the delinquencies may be more important than the delinquencies themselves. Unforeseen tax liabilities (wild fluctuations in company stock options, non-liquid inheritances, liquidation of property forced by marriage dissolution, criminal activities by a spouse or former spouse, and even changes in tax law) may or may not reflect upon a candidate. This is a legally complex area. Investigators may be best served by conducting a case-by-case review of a candidate's situation and should be open to authoritative interpretations by tax professionals.

CONSUMER CREDIT REPORTS

A great deal of financial information is obtainable from consumer credit reporting agencies, and they often provide a timely and inexpensive means by which to assemble summary credit information.

Information obtained from a credit-reporting agency may include name, age, spouse's name, number of dependents, former addresses, occupation, employer, monthly income, paying habits, number of accounts maintained, balances on accounts, and case history of accounts. However, caution should be exercised when reviewing credit information. It is possible that these credit reports may contain some erroneous information. All credit reports should be verified for accuracy, and candidates must be furnished a free copy of that report if it is to be used contrary to their interests. Any circumstance surrounding any negative information should be evaluated on its own merits.

Recognizing that credit reports are frequently inaccurate, both the U.S. Congress and the California Legislature have imposed procedural safeguards to reduce the likelihood that an individual can be unwittingly denied employment based upon erroneous credit information. Background investigators may subject their agencies to unnecessary civil liability in the event that they fail to follow the disclosure rules present in the Fair Credit Reporting Act ("FCRA") (15 USC § 1681 et seq.)⁸² and the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act ("CCRAA") (CC § 1785.2 et. seq.).

⁸² The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) provides additional resources regarding background checks and FCRA: <https://www.ftc.gov/business-guidance/resources/background-checks-what-employers-need-know>.

The FCRA and the CCRAA both govern an employer's use of credit information. Candidates must be notified that a prospective employer may consider credit history in evaluating suitability for appointment. Candidates must also be informed of their rights under the FCRA and CCRAA before any adverse decision can be made.

Credit scores generally have little to do with one's suitability for employment; in fact, that is one of the reasons why the major credit reporting agencies do not include those numbers on employment documents. Further, the economy, in general, may have an impact on things such as credit scores and credit lines, even where an individual has a perfect payment record. Credit itself, or even the lack thereof, may have limited bearing on someone's suitability for employment as a peace officer.

Instead, the background investigation should concern itself with issues such as whether the reported sources of income are lawful and fully accounted for, whether the candidate meets their obligations as agreed, and the reasons underlying any indications of credit problems (e.g., are the credit problems the fault/responsibility of the candidate, or are they related to the actions of others or situations out of their control? Pandemic-related employment issues may have also placed many individuals in unanticipated hardship.) Some candidates have no credit history at all, while others may have extraordinary resources.

PRACTICAL CONSIDERATIONS

Investigators should take heed of the following:

- Financial data is extremely sensitive. Take steps to safeguard it.
- Always be wary of the accuracy of financial data, whether furnished by the candidate or by some other source. It is notoriously inaccurate.
- Whenever conducting a credit check of candidates for employment purposes, a candidate's signed consent is required.
- Whenever credit reports are used for adverse employment purposes, the candidate is entitled to a free copy of any such report under federal and state law.
- Whenever a candidate for employment is rejected from employment, in part or in whole, based on credit information, the candidate must be informed.
- The mere fact of bankruptcy cannot be the sole basis upon which a candidate is denied employment.
- Concentrate on whether a candidate's income and expenditures are lawful, properly reported, and satisfied in a timely manner.
- Absent fraud or conspiracy, financial data pertaining to the candidate's family, business partners, and even spouses (in some cases) are generally irrelevant and not permitted.
- Candidates who are self-employed may need to produce documents such as financial statements from an accountant or even tax returns to support their claimed income.

Investigators should not, however, collect such sensitive documents unless necessary. Additionally, Labor Code § 432.3 prohibits employers from asking candidates for salary history information.

PHS Section 8:

Legal

California law⁸³ and Commission regulations⁸⁴ require that the background investigation include a review of specific sources of information, including, but not limited to:

- Criminal records of the California DOJ
- All police files in jurisdictions where the candidate has resided, worked, or frequently visited
- FBI records
- State DMV, Division of Driver Licenses
- Specified administrative, military, or judicial convictions or adjudications
- POST certification records
- National Decertification Index

This PHS section requires the candidates to detail their history of involvement with legal authorities, as well as to recount illegal but undetected activities. This includes:

- Arrests, detentions, diversion programs and convictions
- Probation
- Civil lawsuits
- Referrals to Child Protective Services⁸⁵
- Home visits by law enforcement officers
- Being the subject of emergency protective and related court orders
- Filing of fraudulent claims (e.g., welfare, worker's compensation)
- Misdemeanor-level acts (past seven years)
- Felony-level acts (lifetime)
- Current illegal drug use and history of recreational drug use

LEGAL HISTORY SEARCH GUIDELINES

Checks of all local agencies where a peace officer candidate has lived, worked, or frequented should be conducted to locate any relevant criminal history that does not appear on the DOJ or FBI fingerprint return. State law PC [§ 13300\(f\)] requires California law enforcement agencies to furnish, without charge, local criminal history information on all peace officer applicants. Local agency checks should be also conducted for all public safety dispatcher candidates; however, note that non-criminal justice agency dispatcher candidates have different levels of protection for their arrest records.⁸⁶

The circumstances surrounding any candidate's arrest/conviction record, whether adult or juvenile, should be investigated. The conduct that led to an arrest or conviction is in many cases as relevant (if not more) than the presence or absence of an arrest.

⁸³ GC § 1029

⁸⁴ Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(3\) and \(4\) and 1959\(e\)\(2\) and \(3\)

⁸⁶ See "Disclosure Provisions" in Chapter 3: "Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework"

The facts surrounding the candidate's present or past involvement in any civil court action should be researched. This requirement applies to peace officers and public safety dispatchers.

Arrest reports and court records should be obtained for both peace officer candidates and public safety dispatcher candidates for law enforcement agencies.

FELONY CONVICTIONS

Any person convicted of a felony (or of a crime in another jurisdiction that would be a felony in California) is prohibited from employment as a California peace officer [GC § 1029(a)]. With few exceptions, this prohibition holds even if the conviction was sealed, expunged, or set aside. It also applies to any convictions that were subsequently reduced to a misdemeanor if the conviction was entered on or after January 1, 2004. As of January 1, 2022, an individual may also be prohibited from employment as a California peace officer if convicted of the offenses listed in Government Code § 1029(a)(9), even if the conviction is for a misdemeanor, not a felony.

Proceedings under juvenile court are generally not considered to be a criminal conviction under Government Code § 1029 unless the individual was certified, tried, and convicted as an adult or the individual was committed to the Department of Juvenile Justice for an offense listed under Welfare and Institutions Code § 707(b). Therefore, juvenile convictions will generally not be a legal bar to appointment as a peace officer but should be reviewed on a case-by-case basis in consultation with the agency's legal counsel. To obtain the records for review, investigators will need to file a petition under Welfare and Institutions Code § 827 with the Juvenile Court in which the candidate was adjudicated. However, even if the juvenile conviction is not disqualifying, the conduct surrounding the offense should certainly be considered as part of the overall background.

There are no similar regulations prohibiting the employment of those convicted of a felony as public safety dispatchers.

MISDEMEANOR CONVICTIONS

Misdemeanor convictions are generally not, in and of themselves, automatically disqualifying either for peace officers or for public safety dispatchers. However, SB 2 (2021) introduced a new provision, effective January 1, 2022, which made certain specified offenses disqualifying for peace officer employment, regardless of whether the individual is convicted of a misdemeanor or felony offense [See GC § 1029(a)(9)]. Additionally, conduct underlying any conviction should be carefully examined with regard to its relevance to the candidate's suitability for appointment, especially the impact on eligibility to possess a firearm pursuant to Penal Code § 1170.18\(j\), § 29805, or 18 USC § 922\(d\) and \(g\). Note: For peace officer candidates, a firearms clearance letter will be mailed separately from DOJ.

Some persons convicted of offenses have undergone legal proceedings either to seal or expunge a criminal conviction. Investigators need to check criminal history information for the full details, and it may be necessary to obtain additional documentation from the court of record to determine the factual outcome.

Department policy will largely govern the response to involvement in criminal activity, detentions, arrests, convictions, diversion programs, and even probation. While the PHS covers a wide array of detected and undetected illegal activity, including illegal use of controlled substances, the decision regarding their impact on hiring (apart from issues of legal disqualification under the law, such as GC § 1029) rests with the agency.

Agencies may be tempted to deal with each issue and admission on a case-by-case basis; however, this approach can result in claims of disparate treatment, especially against individuals in protected classes (i.e., race, gender, age, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, etc.). A well thought-out and articulated policy in advance of the decision may assist in minimizing the likelihood of accusations and litigation.

SEALED AND EXPUNGED RECORDS

In certain circumstances, applicants may lawfully deny that an arrest (and in some cases even a conviction) ever occurred. These issues are complicated, and each circumstance must be carefully evaluated, in consultation with legal counsel, before making a final decision as to a candidate's eligibility for disclosure or non-disclosure of an arrest or conviction, the candidate's eligibility to possess firearms, and suitability for peace officer employment. Public safety dispatcher applicants are generally exempted from disclosing any legal proceeding that was sealed, expunged, or set aside, with the exception of those falling under the Federal Youth Offender Act (18 USC § 5038).

It is important to underscore that a sealing or expungement usually does not relieve the applicant from providing information about the underlying conduct that led to such a sealed or expunged record. An exception would be where an arrest record or accusatory pleading is destroyed by a court pursuant to Penal Code § 851.8. In such cases, either an accusatory pleading was never filed, or the court made a factual finding of innocence, and therefore there is no underlying conduct to disclose. Livescan information obtained from the DOJ, or the FBI are presumptively authoritative records of an individual's history of arrest and/or conviction [See GC § 1029(f)].

The POST PHS admonishes applicants to obtain legal advice before failing to disclose any arrest and/or conviction. Background investigators must therefore determine whether such information, if discovered, constitutes a material omission of required information, or the exercise of a "release from penalties" right afforded to applicants by law.

PRACTICAL CONSIDERATIONS

In dealing with legal issues, it is important to consider:

- The seriousness of the offense itself
- The age of the candidate at the time of the offense/conduct
- How recently the offense/conduct occurred
- The occupation/career path of the candidate at the time of the offense
- Any mitigating circumstances
- The impact, if any, upon the candidate's potential credibility as a witness in a court of law

CIVIL COURT ACTION

The investigation of a candidate's involvement as a plaintiff or defendant in any civil court action can prove to be very informative. The investigator may want to go so far as to check the civil filing index of the superior courts of counties where the candidate has resided.⁸⁷

RESTRAINING OR STAY-AWAY ORDER

Behavior that led to a restraining or stay-away order placed on a candidate can directly relate to the applicant's suitability for the job. Both the behavior and the circumstances should be thoroughly investigated. Restraining orders associated with allegations of domestic violence appear in the CLETS domestic violence restraining orders database and should be revealed during any “wants and warrants check.”

DIVERSION PROGRAMS

There are many forms of court-ordered diversion programs. Peace officer candidates must report such diversions,⁸⁸ but the reporting requirements are different for non-sworn positions, such as public safety dispatcher. Investigators should consult the specific section of law authorizing the diversion in order to determine whether that proceeding must be reported.

FINGERPRINTING

The submittal of fingerprints is required for both peace officer and public safety dispatcher applicants. Throughout California, paper fingerprint cards have been replaced by Live Scan. Agencies that do not have their own Live Scan terminal should contract with another agency to provide this service.

Although Live Scan responses may return in 24 hours or less, problem records can take upwards of 30 days. Firearms clearance letters are mailed separately. Investigators should carefully read each fingerprint return, as quite often problem records require resubmission or other further action.

Due to the costs associated with fingerprinting candidates, agencies have delayed processing fingerprints. Lengthy or indefinite delays can and have resulted in overlooking the submittal of fingerprints entirely, a fact often detected during the POST compliance audit.

A copy of the return must be retained in the candidate’s background file, and Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(3\)\(C\) and 1959\(e\)\(2\)\(C\) specify that a search be made of the FBI records and that a copy of that return must also be retained in the candidate’s background file.

The California DOJ prohibits a hiring agency from using the Automated Criminal History System to investigate a candidate’s history of arrest or conviction or transmitting local criminal history information over the CLETS for employment purposes.

ILLEGAL DRUG AND ALCOHOL USE

As discussed in Chapter 3, “Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework,” it is unlawful to make disability-related inquiries prior to making a COE. Protected disabilities include a history of drug addiction or dependence. Therefore, questions that can be expected to elicit this type of information are prohibited pre-offer. This would include questions such as “Have you ever been treated for drug addiction?” or “How many times in your life have you used illegal drugs?”

The PHS includes questions on current and past illegal drug use. The latter question asks candidates to indicate if they: 1) ever used any drug recreationally, or 2) tried or used drug(s), but only under limited circumstances (e.g., parties, concerts). Candidates who check box (2) are asked to provide details about their drug use, including drug(s) used, most recent date used, and circumstances. Note that if neither box (1) nor (2) is checked, it may be assumed (after ruling out carelessness) that the candidate may have used illegal drugs under more than limited circumstances. However, in compliance with the prohibition on pre-offer disability inquiries, investigating the extent and nature of past illegal drug use should be deferred until the post-offer stage.

Alcoholism, past and current, is a protected disability; therefore, questions about how much a candidate drinks, etc., are not allowable prior to a COE. However, inquiries about job-relevant behavior are permissible, even if that behavior was a result of drunkenness. For example, it is permissible to ask about DUIs or attendance problems at work because of alcohol use.

⁸⁸ In January 2024, Section 12954 was added to the Government Code which makes it unlawful for an employer to discriminate against a candidate who has used cannabis off the job and away from the workplace. It further makes it unlawful for employers to ask candidates about prior cannabis use; therefore, POST revised the Personal History Statements (2-251 and 2-255) to remove references to prior cannabis use (see POST Bulletin 2023-67).

PHS Section 9: Motor Vehicle Operation

Commission Regulations 1953(e)(4) and 1959(e)(3) mandate checking the DMV records of both peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates to determine their driving record and adherence to the law. Although a review of a candidate's driving history is required, the operation of a motor vehicle is neither a state nor a POST requirement for either public safety dispatchers or peace officers. Rather, the review of driving history is intended to provide information regarding the candidate's impulse control/attention to safety, conscientiousness, and other related character attributes.

This section requires candidates to provide information on their driving history, including:

- Driver's license number, state, expiration date, and name under which license was granted
- License refusals, revocations, etc.
- Traffic citations (excluding parking citations)
- Refusal or revocation of automobile liability insurance
- Automobile insurance
- Liability coverage (peace officers only)
- Motor vehicle accidents in the past seven years (peace officers only)

DRIVER'S LICENSE

As mentioned above, possession of a valid driver's license is not a requirement for either peace officer or public safety dispatcher employment, and therefore should not be a condition of employment unless this is an express agency qualification standard.

Under California DOJ policy (Bulletin 98-22-CAS), CLETS subscribing agencies may access DMV records via CLETS for their candidates.

As an alternative, hiring departments can require candidates to provide an official DMV printout of their driving history. For a nominal fee, candidates can request their official driving record by completing and mailing DMV Form INF 1125 or taking it directly to a DMV field office. If mailing the form, advise the candidate to check the box for a certified copy. There is no additional fee for this service.

If the candidate lived or worked outside of California, out-of-state agencies may be contacted for records, although virtually all states (including California) have purge criteria that may limit driving history information. The amount of time that information remains on a DMV record may be influenced by the driving record itself. As a general rule, in California, infractions remain on record for 37 months, misdemeanor offenses for seven years, and DUIs and hit-and-run incidents for ten years.

DRIVER'S LICENSE REFUSED

A driver's license may be refused for a number of reasons that may or may not have relevance to suitability for employment as a peace officer or public safety dispatcher. Investigators should inquire into the reason for the refusal of any state to grant a driver's license to the candidate.

VEHICLE INSURANCE

The California Compulsory Financial Responsibility Law (VC § 16000 et seq.) requires that operators and owners of motor vehicles be covered by vehicle liability insurance or provide other evidence of financial responsibility. The investigator should determine if candidates are complying with insurance requirements on their vehicles. Note that people can be covered by their parent's insurance if they drive their parents' vehicle, or if their vehicle is co-registered to their parents. However, they should be named as an additional insured, either generically on the policy or by name.

DRIVING RECORD

The candidate's driving record, in particular the nature and number of moving violations and the number of accidents, can provide useful information about the individual's driving ability as well as other job-relevant personal characteristics. An individual's history of automobile accidents is less likely to be of critical importance for public safety dispatcher candidates and is therefore not included in that PHS.

In a routine investigation, inquiries should not be made into the number of parking citations the candidate has received, since no precise number of parking citations can be established as being job-relevant. Parking citations are also extremely difficult to track, as many agencies have contracted this function to private organizations. However, the investigator should look into any illegal abuses of the citation process or warrants issued as a result of parking citations.

REVOKED OR SUSPENDED LICENSE

A revoked or suspended driver's license can be very relevant to candidate suitability, especially where such a suspension or revocation resulted from other willful misconduct (i.e., failure to appear, failure to pay a fine).

REFUSED AUTO LIABILITY INSURANCE

The driving history of a candidate who has been refused auto liability insurance must be carefully investigated to determine why the insurance was refused. A candidate's insurability is critical for those agencies where driving is an essential function of the position.

PHS Section 10 Other Topics

The questions in this section ask about a history of physical violence, gang membership, and other behavior associated with anger control problems and anti-social tendencies. Specifically, these items include:

- Denial of a concealed weapons permit
- Membership or association with criminal enterprises, gangs, or other groups that advocate violence, racism, or other forms of bigotry or hate
- Having a tattoo associated with a criminal enterprise, gang, or other group that advocates violence, racism, or other forms of bigotry
- History of physical violence
- History of domestic violence
- History of bias, including biased behaviors and/or attitudes

TATTOOS

The PHS limits inquiries about tattoos to those that signify affiliation with or membership in criminal enterprises, street gangs, or other groups that advocate violence and/or bigotry. Tattoos signifying affiliation with or endorsement of hate groups⁸⁹ or law enforcement gangs⁹⁰, and/or signifying or representing bias⁹¹ should be investigated. No other questions about tattoos in general should be asked unless they can be shown to be relevant to performing the job.

89 The Anti-Defamation League (ADL) Hate Symbols Database provides information on hate symbols and their significance. As acknowledged by the ADL, the symbols should “be evaluated in the context in which they appear,” as some may have contradictory meanings.

POST COMPLIANCE INSPECTIONS AND THE BACKGROUND FILE

POST is required by statute (PC § 13512) to conduct regularly scheduled file reviews to verify that agencies are in compliance with documentation requirements and appointment standards. Background files are inspected of those peace officers and public safety dispatchers (whose agencies are in the POST program) who have been appointed to the agency since the last site visit.

Tables 6.1 and 6.2 (located at the end of this chapter) represent the tables of content from the background investigation files (Background Investigation Tab Dividers). Table 6.1 lists the required areas of documentation for peace officer background investigations; Table 6.2 lists the corresponding required areas of documentation for public safety dispatcher background investigations. The Verification of Qualification for Peace Officer Employment (2-355) form for peace officers, which is completed by the hiring agency, provides additional information on specific areas that will be reviewed by POST when conducting compliance checks.

The specific documentation requirements for each area are discussed briefly below, including the relevant statute and/or regulation, the focus of the review, and common oversights/problems encountered during compliance inspections. Where problems/deficiencies are noted during a compliance inspection, POST Regional Consultants will conduct periodic re-checks to ensure that issues have been addressed, if/as necessary.

The Background Investigation Tab Dividers can be printed or ordered from the Background/Hiring section under the Forms tab on the POST Website.

Tab A BACKGROUND NARRATIVE REPORT

Commission Regulations 1953\(g\) and 1959\(g\)

The narrative report must be compiled by the background investigator and included in the employee's background file. The narrative must meet POST regulatory requirements, including fully addressing all areas of inquiry and providing sufficient information to allow the hiring authority to make a defensible decision. The peace officer background narrative report must follow a specific order, as required by Commission Regulation 1953(g)(1). A sample template and sample completed narrative report are available. (See Sample D.1 and Example D.1, respectively.) Complete documentation must be included in the file.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Narrative does not follow the POST-mandated format (peace officers only).
- Narrative does not provide sufficient detail (e.g., “all references were positive”).
- No details in the narrative to allow for actual identification of contacts interviewed and what was said.
- No reference to the Background Investigation Dimensions.

- No reference to searches for or findings of biased behaviors, and/or bias-relevant traits or attributes, hate group affiliation, or hate speech (peace officers only).
- No identification of data sources reviewed for bias-related content (peace officers only).
- Narrative fails to address all mandatory areas of inquiry.
- Narrative includes all information with no and/or insufficient supporting documentation in applicable tabs.

Peace officer background files must contain a completed Verification of Qualification for Peace Officer Appointment (POST 2-355) form.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Missing or incomplete information on the Verification form.
- Name and contact information missing for persons who verified background material.
- Designee name or signature missing on the Verification form.

Tab B

PERSONAL HISTORY STATEMENT (POST form or alternative)

Commission Regulations 1953\(c\) and 1959\(c\)

A thoroughly completed PHS must be contained in the file. The POST forms 2-251 (Peace Officer) or 2-255 (Public Safety Dispatcher) can be used, or (for dispatchers only) an alternative form that includes questions related to the ten areas of investigation listed in Commission Regulations 1953(c) and 1959(c).

(NOTE: Effective July 1, 2024, for peace officers, “the personal history statement shall be the Personal History Statement -- Peace Officer, POST 2-251 ... or an electronic personal history statement that is an exact replication of the questions contained in the POST 2-251.” [Regulation 1953(c)(4).] An “electronic personal history statement” would be a form developed by an online vendor [e.g., electronic background service], that is in compliance with POST requirements.)

Completed forms will be reviewed to ensure sufficient personal information to begin and conduct the background investigation (e.g., current and past residences, current and past employment [including unexplained gaps in employment or residences], references, and family members).

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Sections of the form are incomplete or inaccurate
- No applicant signature on the statement
- Candidate has not initialed each page, if required by the PHS form
- Does not include inquiries addressing all Government Code § 1029 disqualifications or peace officer appointment
- Alternative PHS does not include inquiries related to all required areas of investigation

Tab C

CRIMINAL AND OTHER QUALIFICATIONS RECORDS CHECKS – Local, State, and National

DOJ/FBI Fingerprint Returns – Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers

Government Code § 1029\(a\),\(b\) and § 1031\(c\), and Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(3\)\(B\),\(C\) and 1959\(e\)\(2\)\(B\),\(C\)

Results from both the California DOJ and the FBI fingerprint checks for criminal history must be in the file. The results must be relevant to the position sought and conducted prior to but no greater than a year from hire.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Confusing a delay notification with an actual clearance return.
- Reports are more than one year old and/or associated with a different position (e.g., non-sworn, correctional officer).
- Failing to request returns from both the DOJ and FBI on the Live Scan request form.

DOJ Firearms Clearance and Qualifications Records Checks – Peace Officers Only

18 USC § 922, Cal. Pen Code § 29800 et seq and Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(3\)\(B\)

Results from the DOJ, Bureau of Identification (BID), pertaining to authorization to possess and carry firearms (i.e., Firearms Clearance) must be contained in the file. The DOJ mails the Firearms Clearance separately from the record check (fingerprint return).

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Confusing a DOJ concealed weapons print return for reserve officers with a Firearms Clearance; a reserve officer needs the same fingerprint returns as a full-time officer
- Confusing a delay notification with an actual clearance return
- Reports are more than one year old and/or associated with a different position (e.g., non-sworn, correctional officer)
- Failing to include POST Profile Report (lateral peace officers)
- Failure to provide documentation of a check of POST records regarding separation reasons and/or serious misconduct allegations (lateral peace officers)

Tab D

DRIVING RECORD CHECK

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(4\) and 1959\(e\)\(3\)

Results from the DMV or other official driving record must be in the file. Information is used to determine the candidate's driving record and adherence to the law. POST regulations do not require a copy of the candidate's driver's license, as operation of a motor vehicle is not required by state law or POST regulation.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Reports are more than one year old
- Copy of driver's license in file in lieu of driving record
- Missing official DMV printout
- Record is from a third-party source (e.g., 4safedrivers)

Tab E

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCY RECORD CHECKS

Cal. Pen Code § 13300\(k\), and Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(3\)\(A\) and 1959\(e\)\(2\)\(A\)

Returns from checks of records from agencies serving jurisdictions where the candidate has lived, worked, attended school, or had other extended stays should be included in the file. The record check inquiries and responses should be appropriate to the position being sought. The background narrative report should identify specific names of agencies checked based on information provided in the PHS. Letters from agencies on letterhead are the best evidence of compliance with this requirement. If agencies do not provide a written return, the fact that they were checked should be noted in the narrative. (Note: some agencies restrict, or decline entirely, requests for local criminal history on non-peace officer applicants).

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Missing from file or not covered in narrative
- Not waiting for all returns
- Copies of CLETS, NCIC, or other similar computer record printouts in file, in lieu of required documentation. (If needed by the hiring authority, these additional documents would be placed under the MISC tab.)

Tab F

CREDIT RECORDS CHECK

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(11\) and 1959\(e\)\(10\)

A check of the individual's financial status must be contained in the file. The check should be conducted prior to but no greater than a year before hire.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Reports are more than one year old.
- Report is not from bona fide credit reporting agency (i.e., Experian, TransUnion, Equifax).

Tab G

EDUCATION VERIFICATION

Cal. Govt Code § 1031\(e\) and Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(5\) and 1959\(e\)\(4\)

Official transcripts are the only authoritative means of verifying a person's educational background. The transcript shall be an original, a certified copy, or a copy marked "copied from original" that is signed and dated by the background investigator.

If any contact was made with current and prior educational institutions attended by the employee, this should be contained in the file also. Peace officer files must contain documentation verifying graduation from either a U.S. public high school, accredited DOD high school, or accredited/approved private or nonpublic high school; verification of passing the GED or other high school equivalency test approved by the State Department of Education; California High School Proficiency Examination; or possession of a two-year (e.g., Associate), four-year (e.g., Bachelor), or advanced degree from an accredited college or university.

The use of credential evaluation services does not meet the requirements of Government Code § 1031(e) or Commission Regulation 1953(e)(5).

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Documented education does not correspond/support education claimed on PHS
- Transcripts are not official
- Diploma rather than a transcript is included
- Copy of transcript is not certified or lacks notation that it was copied from the original
- College transcript does not indicate a completed degree (e.g., Associate, Bachelor, Advanced) when a degree is used to establish minimum education requirement
- School is not accredited per Government Code § 1031(e) – peace officer only
- Includes training records rather than, or in addition to, education records (e.g., transcripts); training records should be placed under the MISC tab
- File contains an evaluation of transcripts and/or education qualification in lieu of actual transcripts from an accredited educational institution

Tab H

EMPLOYMENT ELIGIBILITY AND AGE VERIFICATION

Employment Eligibility – Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers

Documentation verifying employment eligibility must be contained in the background file. Acceptable evidence is any documentation accepted under List A or a combination of List B and List C documents on the USCIS Form I-9, or an employer-completed I-9 form.

Documentation verifying age must be contained in the peace officer's background file. Acceptable evidence includes any documentation used for employment verification, or other acceptable official documentation (e.g., birth certificate, driver's license, passport), that contains birth date information. The documents shall be original, certified, or investigator attested to copy.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Certificate or documentation is not issued by a government agency
- Documents are not certified, original, or investigator-attested to copies of the original and/or certified documents

- Documentation is not valid (e.g., for employment) or is expired
- Accepting an “Abstract of Birth” in lieu of an official birth certificate

Tab I

The DD-214 long form will contain the candidate’s separation information (type of separation, character of service, authority, and reason for separation, separation and reenlistment eligibility codes).

Selective Service registration is required for all males (excluding the sons of foreign diplomats) born on or after January 1, 1960.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Document submitted is not DD-214 long form
- DD-214 long form (identified as Service or Form 2 or 4) not in file
- No documentation is offered for willful failure to register

Tab J

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(8\) and 1959\(e\)\(7\)

Evidence of dissolution of previous marriage(s)/domestic partnerships must be contained in the file.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Failure to include the entire court-issued final dissolution of marriage/domestic partnership, with an affixed court date/verification stamp, in the file.
- Only entry of judgment in file.
- Child custody, similar family documents, or court orders detailing property divisions are not acceptable as proof of dissolution.

Tab K

EMPLOYMENT HISTORY CHECKS

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(6\) and 1959\(e\)\(5\)

Documented verification of contact with previous employers must be contained in the file.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Insufficient number of employers contacted (regulations require at least ten years’ worth)
- Contacts with employers not dated
- No supporting documentation (e.g., questionnaires, employer comments) in the file
- Using former evaluations in lieu of personal contact with employers

- Former law enforcement agency not contacted and/or files not reviewed pursuant to Penal Code § 832.12(b)

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(9\) and 1959\(e\)\(8\)

Documented verification of contact with current and past neighbors must be contained in the file.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Residential history included instead of actual contacts with current/former neighbors
- No checks of past residences
- Contacts with neighbors not dated
- No supporting documentation (e.g., questionnaires, neighbor comments) in the file
- Contact information not included in the file

Tab N

MEDICAL CLEARANCE – Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers

Cal. Govt Code § 1031\(f\) and Commission Regulations 1954\(e\) and 1960\(e\)

Documented verification that the medical evaluation was conducted according to regulation must be contained in the background file. The suitability declaration must be signed by the examining physician and must include the physician's printed name, license number, the date the examination took place, that it met appropriate regulatory requirements, and that the individual was found suitable for employment. A copy of the suitability declaration is permissible, if the original is maintained by the agency's HR department. The actual medical examination results (i.e. medical information) must be kept as a confidential medical record, separate from the background file.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Suitability declaration is not the POST-mandated form - Peace Officers Only.
- Declaration form is signed by a medical assistant or nurse practitioner rather than a physician
- Declaration form is not completely filled out
- Confidential medical information in file
- Evaluation completed more than one year prior to date of employment/ appointment

The actual psychological results (i.e., medical information) must be kept as a confidential medical record, separate from the background file.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Suitability declaration is not the POST-mandated form.
- Declaration form is not signed by psychologist
- Declaration form is not completely filled out
- Confidential psychological information in file
- Evaluation completed more than one year prior to date of employment
- No documentation in file; merely a note that clearance letter is kept at HR
- Failure of the department to verify screening psychologist is compliant with POST CPE requirements at the time of the evaluation (<https://post.ca.gov/psychological-evaluators-list>). Non-compliant status will invalidate the clearance.

DEVELOPMENT OF POST BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION DIMENSIONS

The creation of the POST background investigation dimensions resulted from a review of multiple job analyses of both the peace officer and public safety dispatcher position, including the 1977 and 1998 job analyses from which the previous background dimensions were derived, a personality-based peace officer job analysis conducted by POST in 2003 which led to the development of psychologically-based job dimensions, a 2003 project by the DOJ on Community Oriented Policing, and a 2002 POST study leading to the creation of oral interview factors.

An additional rich source of information about both job classifications was provided by the O*NET database. Created in 1999 by the U.S. Department of Labor, this interactive database includes information on tasks, skills, abilities, knowledge, work activities, and attributes for 1,122 occupations, including police patrol officers and police, fire, and ambulance dispatchers. Because the O*NET assesses all occupations against the same set of criteria, it provides a very effective means for comparing peace officer and dispatcher worker attributes.

Table A.1 on the next page lists 21 O*NET job requirements and attributes most relevant to background investigations. The importance of these attributes for peace officers and public safety dispatchers are extremely similar; only a few percentage points separate the ratings for virtually every characteristic. These results serve to demonstrate that, despite the fact that peace officers and public safety dispatchers involve very different duties and tasks, these two occupations are strikingly similar with respect to many worker requirements.

Given this similarity, one common set of ten background dimensions was created for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. The dimensions are organized into five major categories (Moral Character, Handling Stress and Adversity, Work Habits, Interactions with Others, and Intellectually-Based Abilities). These dimensions are fully described in Chapter 2, Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher Background Investigation Dimensions.

SUBJECT: CONDITIONAL OFFER OF EMPLOYMENT

Dear Mr./Ms. _____:

This letter constitutes a conditional offer of employment as a _____ [Position] _____ with the _____ [Agency Name] _____ Department. However, a final, unconditional job offer may be made only upon successful completion of each and every one of the following:

1. Medical screening in accordance with the provisions of California Government Code §§ 1031 and 12940, and requirements established by the California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training.
2. Psychological screening in accordance with California Government Code § 1031(f) and requirements established by the California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training.
3. Completion of the background investigation pursuant to California Government Code § 1031(d) and Commission Regulation 1953, to include information that was neither legal nor practical to obtain prior to the extension of this offer, or in response to issues that arose subsequent to this offer.

Should you be unsuccessful in any of the above evaluations, this job offer is revoked.

Due to some expected attrition of candidates who either resign or are removed from the eligibility list at the post-offer stage, the number of conditional job offers extended may exceed the number of immediate vacancies. If this happens, you may be placed in a candidate pool and will be extended an offer of employment as soon as a vacancy arises.

ADVISEMENT TO CANDIDATE REGARDING FALSE STATEMENTS

ADVISEMENT TO CANDIDATE REGARDING FALSE STATEMENTS

CANDIDATE NAME:

The overall purpose of the pre-employment background investigation is to verify that your application and any statements you have made to your prospective employer concerning your qualifications are true.

The California courts have held that an employer has a legal duty to know the persons whom it employs. In some cases, California law may mandate a background investigation before employment, while in other cases it is merely a case of public policy or prudence before placing someone in a position of public trust.

Both State and Federal courts have also held that there is an absolute necessity for public employees to be truthful. You must understand that a lack of truthfulness or deception of any type on your part will automatically and irrevocably result in your application being rejected from further consideration.

For some people, there may be one or more incidents or occurrences in their background which they regret or over which they may feel some embarrassment. A prospective employer will not make inquiries into areas of a person's background that have no legitimate bearing on their qualifications for the job. You should understand that the mere presence of so-called "negative" information in your background is not automatically disqualifying. For example, an applicant may have engaged in petty thievery as a child, used illegal drugs, been fired from a job, or been convicted of a crime as an adult. While these things in and of themselves may not automatically remove that person from consideration for a job, lying about them will.

A pre-employment background investigation is not intended to be an intimidating experience or an unwarranted invasion into your privacy. Your background investigator will contact persons who know you, including present and/or former employers, and will examine official documents and records concerning you to assure that you have been honest in your application and to fulfill the legal mandates imposed by the courts and legislature. The more forthright you have been, the greater the likelihood that your background can be completed in a timely and successful manner.

CERTIFICATION

I understand that any false statement and/or deliberate misrepresentations, whether by omission or commission, will result in my application being automatically and irrevocably rejected from further consideration. I certify that I have read the above statement, understand its contents and have been furnished a copy of it.

Sample B.3ADVISEMENT SEEKING LATERAL PLACEMENT - PEACE OFFICERS

SEEKING LATERAL PLACEMENT

California Government Code § 1031 prohibits the employment of persons who are not of good moral character or who are not fit to serve as peace officers. This legal prohibition applies equally to persons seeking employment as peace officers, as well as to persons already employed as peace officers seeking appointment with another agency.

STATEMENT

You will undergo a rigorous, in-depth background investigation as a result of your application for this position. In the event that your background investigation for this position should uncover information that you have, or are suspected of having been, engaged in illegal activities while employed as a peace officer, this information will likely bar you from further consideration for this position. Further, in the event that this illegal activity occurred during the time of your present employment as a peace officer, or if this background investigation should uncover information which raises questions about your fitness to continue as a peace officer, this information may be transmitted to your present employer for their independent investigation.

ADVISEMENT SEEKING LATERAL PLACEMENT - PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHERS

SEEKING LATERAL PLACEMENT

California Code of Rules and Regulations, Title 11 § 1959 [enacted pursuant to California Penal Code § 13510(c)] prohibits the employment of persons who exhibit past behavior incompatible with the performance of the duties of a public safety dispatcher. This legal prohibition applies equally to persons seeking employment as public safety dispatchers, as well as to persons already employed as public safety dispatchers seeking appointment with another agency.

STATEMENT

You will undergo a rigorous, in-depth background investigation as a result of your application for this position. In the event that your background investigation for this position should uncover information that you have, or are suspected of having been, engaged in illegal activities while employed as a public safety dispatcher, this information will likely bar you from further consideration for this position. Further, in the event that this illegal activity occurred during the time of your present employment as a public safety dispatcher, or if this background investigation should uncover information which raises questions about your fitness to continue as a public safety dispatcher, this information may be transmitted to your present employer for independent investigation.

SAMPLE AUTHORIZATION/ADVISEMENT TO CONDUCT A PRE-EMPLOYMENT PEACE OFFICER BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION

AUTHORIZATION/ADVISEMENT

CANDIDATE NAME:

I fully recognize that under California law, individuals must clearly demonstrate their personal, medical, and psychological fitness to serve in the position of a peace officer. I further recognize that an employing agency must make reasonable efforts to ensure that any person employed as a peace officer will conform to the standards required by law.

I understand that I am authorizing an intensive investigation into all aspects of my personal, medical, and psychological fitness, and that such investigation will include contacting persons and/or organizations who have information relating to my fitness, including if I am or have been a peace officer in California, information protected under sections 832.7 of the California Penal Code and 1043 of the California Evidence Code. I also understand that those persons and/or organizations may feel inhibited, intimidated, or otherwise reticent about furnishing information concerning my fitness unless confidentiality of their information can be guaranteed on a permanent basis, which means I will not be permitted to access or review information communicated by those persons or organizations about my suitability for peace officer employment.

I further recognize that although some of the information contained in the background investigative report is a matter of public record, or may otherwise be accessible to me, this information may be inextricably interwoven with other confidential data to which I otherwise would not be privy. I have been informed that because this background investigation is mandated by law, responses from persons contacted, whether solicited or unsolicited, are privileged under California Civil Code § 47 or other applicable provisions of law. Those persons must be able to communicate freely and openly with a background investigator about my qualifications and suitability for law enforcement employment without fear that their statements might subject them to liability or become known to me.

Therefore, I exonerate, release, and discharge the person contacted by my prospective employer, together with my prospective employer, and their officers, agents, or assigns, from any claim for liability or damages of any kind, whether in law or in equity, on behalf of myself, my heirs, agents, or assigns, for their communications about my suitability for employment, and for any refusal to make available to me any and all confidential information contained in this pre-employment investigation, including but not limited to the identity of any person or organization who may have supplied information in the course of this investigation, as well as the substance of any such information supplied which might identify that person, and from any other compliance with this authorization or attempts to comply with it.

I have had adequate time to review this form, I understand its meaning and purpose and understand that, if requested, I will be furnished a signed copy of this form.

EMPLOYMENT INFORMATION – PEACE OFFICER

CANDIDATE NAME:

California Government Code § 1031, subdivision (d), provides that each class of Public Officer or Employees declared by law to be Peace Officers shall “be of good moral character, as determined by a thorough background investigation.”

As a candidate for a position with the [Name of Employer] , I am required to furnish information for use in determining my qualifications. I accordingly authorize, for 120 days from the date I sign this release and waiver, any authorized representative of my prospective employer bearing this release or any copy thereof, to obtain any and all information you have concerning me, including but not limited to, information pertaining to my employment, job applications, performance evaluations, attendance records, disciplinary actions, eligibility for rehire, and other information relevant to my suitability for peace officer employment, including any and all files otherwise deemed confidential or privileged, including any and all materials that have been sealed by agreement, court order, or otherwise, including, but not limited to, disciplinary matters. I acknowledge and understand that when my prior employers, or other persons, provide information to my prospective employer in order for my prospective employer to determine suitability for peace officer employment, that the disclosure of information by my prior employer or other persons to my prospective employer is protected, by, among other things, the privilege found in California Civil Code § 47, subsections (b) and (c), and California Government Code § 1031.1.

Pursuant to California Penal Code section 832.12, I further understand that peace officers, when seeking employment with another department or agency employing peace officers in this state, are required to give written permission to the hiring department or agency to review his or her general personnel file and any other separate file designated by his or her agency, including investigations of misconduct.

I hereby acknowledge and understand that certain records or information contained in any of the files, materials or information that may be disclosed to my prospective employer pursuant to this release may be considered confidential under California Penal Code § 832.7 and other applicable law, and therefore potentially otherwise subject to discovery or disclosure only pursuant to a noticed motion under California Evidence Code § 1043. By signing this authorization, I hereby voluntarily and irrevocably waive any and all rights to have any record or records or information contained therein discovered or disclosed only by a noticed motion pursuant to California Evidence Code § 1043, and instead hereby freely and voluntarily authorize the disclosure of all such records, including those records to which, as an employee, the undersigned would have or did have access. I agree that if I am hired, I may choose to have information gathered during the background investigation remain confidential and not become part of my general personnel file for purposes of the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act, Gov’t Code §§ 3300 et seq.

I hereby release, discharge, and exonerate the agency and/or any person furnishing information pursuant to this release, including their agents and representatives, from liability or damages of any kind arising out of the furnishing and/or inspection of records in compliance with this authorization and request to release information. I hereby waive any and all right and/or opportunity to review, inspect and/or obtain the background investigation report and/or any information provided during the background investigation.

It is further understood, acknowledged, and agreed to, that any information secured pursuant to this statutorily required background investigation, which would negatively reflect on my fitness for duty, may be furnished to my current law enforcement employer or other third parties as may be deemed necessary in the course of fulfilling its official responsibilities.

This release shall be binding on my legal representatives, heirs, and assigns.

1031.1. (a) For purposes of performing a thorough background investigation for candidates not currently employed as a peace officer, as required by subdivision (d) of § 1031, or in the case of an applicant for a position other than a sworn peace officer within a law enforcement agency, an employer shall disclose employment information relating to a current or former employee, upon request of a law enforcement agency, if all of the following conditions are met:
